District Pay Increase May Be Delayed By Senators

Abbreviated Bill Intended to Insure Increase for Truman During New Term

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senate leaders last night decided to remove the retroactive pay boost for 8000 District classified employes from the emergency pay increase bill.

The new plan, up for Senate action today, will call for limiting the pre-inauguration pay increase bill to the salary hikes of President, Vice President and the Speaker of the House, according to Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), prospective Senate majority leader.

Out of the bill would also go the pay increases recommended by the Senate Civil Service Committee for Cabinet officers, and some 200 other top Federal jobholders.

Counter-Move Starts

Lucas said it now appears that only the abbreviated version of the pay raise bill could be passed by the House before the inauguration. Unless that deadline is met, the presidential pay boosts could not become effective for another four years.

As Lucas made the announcement, a counter-move was in the making against cutting the bill.

Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), a co-sponsor of the committee bill, said the short form of the bill would be "bad business."

Flanders said he had every expectation that President Truman would step into the picture to urge passage of the bill as recommended by the Senate Committee.

Truman's Stand Cited

The President is understood to have sent recent word to congressional leaders that he would rather see the pay increase go through for the 200 or more top Federal policy jobs than to have his own pay raised.

The bill would boost the President's pay from his present $75,000 to $100,000 a year and he would get an additional $50,000 annual expense allowance for which he would not have to account. The $40,000 expense allowance he now gets would continue, and he would continue to account for that. The Vice President and Speaker would each get $30,000 salary and $10,000 expense money.

Flanders also announced that he will go himself before the Senate Republican Policy Committee at 10 a. m. today to ask his party's support for the committee pay bill.

Lucas said he had conferred with Senate Republican leaders, including Senators Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) and had cleared with them the plan for the abbreviated bill.

Lucas explained that from conferences with House leaders it had become apparent that the only bill that could get through the House within the time allowed was one that could be approved by unanimous consent.

GOP Objections Seen

Lucas indicated that there would be some Republican objections to some of the pay boosts for jobs other than the top three, while there might be agreement on the increase for President, Vice President and Speaker.

Necessity for the unanimous consent procedure in the House was explained by the fact that the House committees have not yet been organized, thus forestalling immediate use of the usual legislative procedure.

Lucas said the House could not be expected to give unanimous consent to the bill recommended by the Senate committee. If the bill is not cut to cover just the three top jobs, he said, "we won't get anything through."

Flanders said he feels the Senate should pass the bill without cutting it, regardless of what the House might later do. "I don't think the Senate should lie down on the thing," he said.

"From my point of view it is important to get this approved

Tugboat Strike Deadline Passes in N. Y.

Effects of Walkout Would Begin to Be Felt at 7 A. M. Today

New York, Jan. 13 (Thursday)—(NYHT).—The deadline for a tugboat strike in New York harbor was passed at 12:01 a. m. today without any announcement that the tugboat workers and employers had been able to reach agreement in their dispute.

When the negotiators went into session at 8:30 o'clock last night at City Hall, they were separated by two major issues. Mayor William O'Dwyer kept in close touch with developments while the five mediators tried to break the impasse.

Local 333 of the United Marine Division of the International Longshoremen's Association had declined to reveal the details of its plan to tie up the 400 harbor craft, but the effect of a walkout could not be felt before today's crews reported for work on the 7 a. m. and 8 a. m. shifts. If the strikers followed the precedent of the February, 1946, strike, they would fulfil jobs under way, then steer their craft to home bases for the lay-up.

The latest word from John J. Corrigan, counsel for Local 333, was that the union was determined to call the strike on schedule if no agreement was at hand at the deadline. The president of the local, Capt. William V. Bradley, declined further comment.

[There was an unofficial report that negotiations would continue until 3:30 or 4 a. m. with a likelihood of a settlement.

[The United Press said the Commerce and Industry Association estimated on January 1 that the city had a seven-day supply of fuel on hand.

[During the tug strike in February, 1946, Mayor O'Dwyer proclaimed a state of emergency. Homes were ordered kept at a temperature of not more than 62 degrees; all amusement places were closed; schools, libraries and museums were shut down; advertising signs were turned off; transportation schedules were reduced and, with most persons staying out of the shopping centers, business losses ran into the millions.—Editors Note.]

In a last-minute effort to head off the strike, the Marine Towing and Transportation Employers Association brought in new proposals to the union at 5 p. m. yesterday. These included a wage increase offer of 12 per cent, topping their last previous "final" offer by 2 per cent. The employers also made further concessions in other benefits demanded by the union.

Although the union has been demanding 25 per cent increases, negotiators were reported as satisfied with the 12 per cent offer.

Air Force Decision Review

Defense Office Questions Cut In Jet Planes for Giant B-36s

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Air Force decision to cut back construction of jet planes and build more giant B-36 bombers will be thoroughly reexamined by the Office of Defense, it was learned last night.

Defense Secretary James Forrestal plans to inquire into the capabilities of the controversial bomber, the soundness of greater emphasis on strategic bombing and the wisdom of spending large additional sums on big, relatively slow, conventional bombers, said an informed source.

Critics of the 150-ton craft which is powered by six-piston engines, charge the bomber has not met its designed speed and range and is highly vulnerable to speedy jet fighters. They questioned the Air Force decision yesterday as "putting too many eggs in one basket."

To Call on Other Agencies

Under the law, Secretary Forrestal must pass on all contracts for new planes. He recommends the release of funds for aircraft orders to President Truman. Officials said his consideration of the B-36 order will be particularly searching and that various defense agencies will be called upon for advice in this instance.

One question that top defense officials want answered is whether the recasting of Air Force procurement plans in favor of strategic bombardment will provide sufficient tactical and transport planes of modern types for Army support and other missions.

Meanwhile, members of the House Armed Services Committee conferred behind closed doors with Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington and Army Secretary Kenneth S. Royall and aides.

Revamping Necessitated

Afterward, Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), new chairman of the group, told newsmen that only "general legislative matters" were discussed. But he revealed that his group plans an exhaustive review of President Truman's budget to see if the division of funds between the Army, Navy and Air Force is justified. Almost an equal apportionment of the $14,218,000,000 was made among the services.

Vinson has declared that he disagrees with the President in cutting back Air Force strength from the present 60 groups and planned 70 to only 48. He says he feels similarly about reduction in plane procurement funds.

This Air Force curtailment made necessary the revamping of USAF procurement plans announced Tuesday.

The House committee chief said that heads of the Army, Navy and Air Force will be called before the British Deny Israeli Charges 'Categorically'

London, Jan. 12 (NYHT).—The British Foreign Office denied "categorically" today Israeli charges to the United Nations Security Council that Britain is "menacing" Israel and has been supplying arms to the belligerent Arabs in the Middle East.

The Foreign Office denial came as the British Cabinet was understood to have spent part of a four-hour meeting on the Anglo-Israeli-Arab crisis.

There also were fresh reports today of a split in the cabinet over the policies of Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, whose handling of the Middle East crisis is drawing increasing criticism here.

There was no official confirmation of the reported cabinet split. The London Evening Standard, however, said Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was leading the "revolt" and was supported by Herbert Morrison, Deputy Prime Minister, and Aneurin Bevan, Minister of Health.

Prime Minister Clement Attlee and A. V. Alexander, Minister of Defense, were said to be supporting Bevin in the dispute.

Whether Sir Stafford is actively opposing Bevin or not, it was clear that the hostile public reaction in the United States to Britain's latest moves in the Middle East is embarrassing to him. Sir Stafford

'Fallacy' in U. S. Plans

Controls Can't Stop A-Bombs, American U. N. Expert Warns

New York, Jan. 12 (NYHT).—Frederick Osborn, deputy United States representative on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, warned tonight that no control scheme that might be devised could prevent the use of atomic weapons in a long war.

Osborn said it was "a fallacy" to believe that even the proposals devised by the United States, and indorsed by 46 of the 58 United Nations countries, could keep nations from using "every effective weapon of war available to them" when backed against a wall in a new war.

The aim of the control plan agreed upon by the majority of U. N. members over Soviet objections, he said, is "to do away with the national rivalries now running riot" in the atomic field by setting up "a world cooperative" whose members would be unable to stockpile atomic weapons for surprise use at the beginning of a war.

Osborn spoke at the first of a series of free public lectures sponsored by the New York University Graduate School of Arts and Science.

"It is not wholly impossible to believe, although the present prospects are dim, that the Soviet may some time desire to cooperate with the rest of the world, or that when that time comes the Soviet may find this (majority) plan of cooperation in atomic energy more acceptable than any other," Osborn said.

May Foreshadow Deflation

Sharp Drop in Business Loans Laid to 'Healthy' Inventory Cut

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A spectacular 195-million-dollar slump in business loans during the week ended January 5 was attributed by Federal Reserve authorities last night to a "healthy reduction of inventories and outstanding loans" by many businesses.

Reserve Board officials, in reporting the slump, said it was the largest in 10 years and one of the largest in the Reserve System's history. It was the second week in succession that a drop was reported. Loans dropped 53 million dollars in the week ended December 29.

"However, loans were at a near-record figure," a Reserve System spokesman explained. Many businesses, particularly retail stores, made unusually large cuts in inventories after the holidays with post-holiday sales. Such sales were conducted on a larger scale than in recent years, and the receipts used to reduce loans.

Part of the reduction, he added, was due to "window dressing" by business firms that customarily pay off large amounts of their loans just before the end of the year so as to make their annual financial statements look good.

Officials said that if debt reductions continue large, it will indicate the end of the inflationary period is near.

The development came less than a week after President Truman, in his economic report, had urged Congress to give the Reserve Board greater powers to restrict bank lending as an anti-inflationary device.

Mr. Truman asked that the board be permitted to freeze 6 per cent more of checking account funds and 2½ per cent of savings account funds so they could not be used for lending. This would hold many additional billions of dollars from being used for loans.

The last similar action by the board last summer, which covered 2 per cent of checking accounts and 1½ per cent of savings account funds, was estimated to have blocked increased loans of two billion dollars.

The decreases in loan volume covered all of the 12 Federal Reserve districts, except Minneapolis. Half of the entire reduction was shown in two districts: 53 million in New York City and 45 million in the Chicago district.

The decline sent the total volume of business loans down to $15,366,000,000.

Real estate loans were off, too. While the decline was relatively small—just one million dollars—it also was the second consecutive week of downturn in real estate loans, which have been rising almost without a break since the war's end.

The downturn left the total of real estate loans by leading city banks at $4,061,000,000.

In contrast, holdings of Government securities by these banks increased $497,000,000 to total $33,484,000,000, reflecting sharp increases in holdings of one-year and 90-day securities, with a heavy offset in holdings of notes and a 33-million-dollar decrease in Government bond holdings.

Unit Favors 4 Days Off For Inaugural

Senate Committee To Push Passage Today of Bill for Jan. 20-21 Holiday

A joint resolution to give Federal employes in the Metropolitan area a four-day weekend for President Truman's inauguration was reported to the Senate yesterday by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), slated to become Senate majority leader, said an effort will be made today to present the bill "for unanimous consent" of the upper house.

If there is an objection from the floor, the resolution will come up for vote at a later date.

The measure was introduced by Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) on January 6. It would give Government workers in Greater Washington a holiday on Thursday and Friday, January 20 and 21. They already have Saturdays and Sundays off.

Executive Order Ready

Existing statutes make Inauguration Day a holiday for Federal employes in the District only. An executive order has been prepared to extend the holiday to all Government workers in the metropolitan area if legislation fails.

The President also has authority to make Friday a holiday if he so chooses, but he does not want to do so without congressional authority.

To clear the way for the 7-mile-long parade that will leave the Capitol at 1 p. m. Thursday, Traffic Director George T. Keneipp said 2 wooden streetcar loading platforms will be removed.

He said work will begin at 9:30 a. m. Monday, and the Traffic Department will paint temporary zones for loading on the street surface. Stanchions will be put up by the Capital Transit Co.

Cugat's Orchestra to Play

Keneipp said the job would require only a day. Replacement, which may take two days, will begin at 9:30 a. m. Friday.

The 1949 Inaugural Committee announced yesterday that Xavier Cugat will be the third popular orchestra to play at the President's Ball Thursday night at the National Guard Armory.

Bands to Entertain 5000

About 5000 persons will be entertained by Cugat, Benny Goodman and Guy Lombardo and their bands, starting at 10 p. m.

Plans for a "Pullman city" capable of accommodations equal to two of Washington's biggest hotels were disclosed by Thomas Q. Beesley, of the National Transportation Committee.

For the pre-Inaugural Gala, to be held in the Armory Wednesday night, committee officials said three production numbers have been planned: "Whistle Stop Express," "I Love a Piano," and "Parade of the States."

Motion picture, radio and stage stars will participate in the show. The finale will present a 525-piece musical ensemble directed by Sam Jack Kaufman. It will consist of the National Symphony Orchestra, the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps bands, along with an 185-voice chorus.

Special lyrics and music have been prepared by Allan Zee and Charles Allredge, of the Inaugural Committee.

To Avert 3-Billion Deficit

ECA Nations Face Possible 'Austerity' Reign Until 1952

(See "People in the News," Page 2.)

Post Reporter

The nations of western Europe may have to make "very drastic and unpleasant decisions" to avert a possible deficit of three billion dollars by the time the Marshall Plan ends in 1952.

This was the word brought to Washington yesterday by Robert Marjolin of France, secretary-general of the 19-nation Organization for European Economic Cooperation in Paris. Marjolin has just arrived at the request of the Economic Cooperation Administration, to give technical help in preparing ECA's estimates and requests for the new Congress.

With him have come Sir Edmund Hall Patch of Great Britain, chairman of the OEEC executive committee, Baron Snoy of Belgium, deputy chairman of its council, and technicians familiar with the problems of each of the 19 participants in the Marshall Plan.

Marjolin told a press conference yesterday that the recent OEEC estimate of a three-billion-dollar deficit in 1952 did not mean Europe expected the United States to make up the shortage.

"Our basic assumption," he said, "is that American aid will end in 1952. The three billion figure means that if the European countries do not do more to balance their payments they will have to cut three billion dollars from their imports in 1952."

This, he said, would represent a cut of 25 per cent in imports, and would involve "complete dislocation and disruption of the productive system of western Europe."

What the European nations must do now, he said, is to take another look at their policies and bring them into line with the realities that will exist in 1952.

Among the steps needed, in his opinion, were the further pushing of exports by lowering export prices; the improvement of marketing techniques and advertising methods; the development of new sources of supply in colonial territories; the further development of intra-European trade; the stabilization of currencies, and, above all, the further cutting of imports.

Marjolin conceded this would permit only a "very slow rise" in the European standard of living between now and 1952. But he expressed confidence that after 1952, if these reforms were undertaken, the European countries could afford a better standard of life than at present or in the next three or four years.

"The main responsibility now lies with the national govern-

Truman Pays Flying Visit To Marshall

President Makes Surprise Flight and Returns to Capital

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman made a sentimental flight to Pinehurst, N. C., yesterday and spent an hour talking with Secretary of State Marshall.

He took off at 1:13 p. m. in an Army Constellation and arrived back at the Military Air Transport Service Terminal at 6:26 p. m.

"You gave us quite a surprise," a White House reporter told the President.

"Well, I needed to see the Secretary of State," Mr. Truman said, smiling, "so I went to see him."

General Marshall, who is retiring as Secretary of State on Janary 20, went to his winter home in Pinehurst after an operation at Walter Reed Hospital early last month for the removal of a kidney.

Mr. Truman said that his visit was "personal," and without any significance from a foreign policy standpoint.

"I'm glad I went," he said, "because we rehashed a lot of stories that were mutually satisfactory."

The Chief Executive disclosed that he made up his mind to fly to North Carolina at about 10 o'clock yesterday morning. He notified Mrs. Marshall in advance but told her not to tell her husband.

"Was he surprised?" the President was asked.

"Very much so," he said, chuckling.

"How did you find him?" reporters asked the President.

"He was looking better than I've seen him look in a month," Mr. Truman said.

The Chief Executive was accompanied by Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary; Brig. Gen. Marshall Carter, aide to General Marshall, and Brig. Gen. Robert Landry, Air Force aide to the President.

Secretary Ross told reporters in Pinehurst that Mr. Truman had flown down because it would be his last opportunity to talk with General Marshall before the soldier-statesman retires on Inauguration Day.

At the White House, reporters asked Assistant Press Secretary Eben Ayres if there was any reason why they should not have been notified in advance of Mr. Truman's flight.

"Is there any reason why they should be?" he countered, and added: "The President goes lots of places without the press knowing about it."

Berle Upholds Acheson, Asks Confirmation

Clash Over Russian Policy Is Minimized In Wire to Connally

Dean Acheson's confirmation as Secretary of State will not be opposed by Adolf A. Berle, jr., the former Assistant Secretary of State who once differed with him over American policy toward the Soviet Union.

Berle has sent a telegram to Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, not only disavowing any opposition to Acheson but appealing to the committee for swift approval to prevent any "interregnum" in the conduct of foreign policy.

Connally may read the telegram at the committee's public hearing on Acheson, scheduled to start at 10:30 o'clock this morning in the caucus room of the Senate Office Building. Old-timers on Capitol Hill said yesterday it would be the first occasion in this century when any nominee for Secretary of State has had to face a public hearing over his nomination.

Friends Confident

Acheson's friends were glad, however, that the questioning would be conducted in public. They felt complete confidence that the Senate would confirm him by an overwhelming vote.

Acheson will be the first witness today, and may be the only one, although Connally said one or two others might "possibly" be called. The Senator said he would have to consult his fellow members about asking Berle to appear personally, although the former Assistant Secretary has not asked to testify.

Berle's appearance was suggested by Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), a former member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, because of the story of the Berle-Acheson disagreement over Russia in 1944.

Change in Views

Berle's telegram was understood to say however, that this was simply a difference between honest men; that Acheson had changed his views since then, and had proved the change by sponsoring the so-called Truman doctrine of aid to Greece and Turkey in 1947, and that he (Berle) would not want in any way to throw doubt on Acheson's qualifications for the post of Secretary.

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), a committee member, indicated that Acheson might be questioned about his relationship toward Alger Hiss.

"I've received an average of about 10 letters a day concerning the Acheson appointment," said

Cyst Removed in June

Surgery to Avert Vocal Injury Revealed by Marian Anderson

New York, Jan. 12 (NYHT).—Marian Anderson, American contralto, said today that she underwent a dangerous operation last June for the removal of a cyst that threatened damage to the voice that has made her famous.

June 29, doctors removed from the esophagus a growth that developed during 1947. The operation was performed in the Jewish Hospital in Brooklyn by Dr. Rudolph Nissen. The singer told a New York Herald Tribune reporter that the surgery was accomplished through an incision in her back, and that it was an "extremely delicate matter" in which the "least deviation" might have permanently injured the vocal cords.

She was hospitalized for 12 days. Afterward she was not permitted to use her voice. She did not know that she could ever sing again. Finally she was permitted, in late August, to attempt a rehearsal. She attempted a "little French song" which she sang without difficulty, and it was only then that her physicians knew her voice had not been impaired.

She revealed her illness, which started in the spring of 1947 while she was in Jamaica and Havana, just as she prepared to open a new concert tour. She will open the season at Ann Arbor on October 18 and leave for an European tour April 28.

Senate GOP Plan to Gag Debate Set For Hearings

Action to Open Way For Civil Rights Program Runs Into Dixie Opposition

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A move to curb future Senate filibusters ran into Southern Democratic "resistance" yesterday as the Senate Rules Committee ordered hearings starting January 24.

Senate Republicans, committed to a quick filibuster limit to open the way for the civil rights program, tried to force earlier hearings but lost, 6 to 5, by a party-line Rules Committee vote.

Seventeen Southern Democrats, headed by Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), meanwhile announced "unalterable opposition" to any rules change that would gag debate by less than a two-thirds Senate vote.

Opposition Reaffirmed

The Southern Senators again voiced opposition to the civil rights program.

Russell never used the dark word "filibuster." He said the 17-man group withheld any action on "a program of resistance" until the proposed debate limit is spelled out by the Rules Committee.

Republicans, plugging for an early Senate debate limitation, forced the issue to a head at a meeting of the Senate Rules Committee, called "purely for organization purposes."

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) offered, and then withdrew, a motion to report out immediately a debate-limiting resolution. He said he withdrew it after demands were made for hearings on the rules change.

Another Motion Offered

Knowland offered, instead, a motion to start hearings on rules revision on Friday, January 14, contending that unless action is taken quickly the reform will bog down in other Senate business and the civil rights fight will be lost.

Knowland's second motion lost, 6 to 5, after Senate Rules Committee Chairman Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.), who is also chairman of the joint Congressional Inaugural Committee, cited Inaugural Week activities as a barrier to immediate hearings.

Hayden moved to start hearings January 24, and the committee agreed.

The hearings were limited to testimony by Senators themselves, but two Southern Senators contended the hearings should be opened to the public. They are Senators John C. Stennis (D., Miss.) and Russell B. Long (D., La.).

Hayden to Take Floor

Hayden said he will take the Senate floor today to announce the decision to hear interested Senators, and Knowland indicated he will have something to say in reply.

A report spread that Knowland and some other Republicans may "filibuster" the Administration's pay increase bill coming up in the Senate today in an effort to put the rules change ahead of it, but Knowland said:

"Nobody has suggested filibuster, but there might be a discussion. As between the pay bill and the rules change, I think the rules question more important."

Reputedly having the backing of the Democratic leadership is the so-called Hayden-Wherry resolution. This continues to require a two-thirds Senate vote to limit debate, but would eliminate a number of filibuster devices by making any matter pending before the Senate subject to cloture.

Phone Service Assistant Listed As a Suicide

Miss Mary B. C. Baker, a Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. service assistant, was found dead at her home, 407 Whitestone rd., Silver Spring, last night, a bullet wound through her head.

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County coroner, issued a verdict of suicide.

Dr. Broschart said the 40-year-old woman's body was found about 10:45 p. m. by her sister, Mrs. Adelia B. Kloak, with whom she lived. The body, he said, was lying across a bed.

An examination, he said, showed she had been dead since 2:15 p. m. Her sister, he said, had been away from home and had found the body on her return.

"I could have sold both articles many times," said Mrs. L. P. of Chapin St. after advertising a sofa-bed and chair in The Post. She disposed of the furniture first day and received $40.

Robert Marjolin One of First to Speak As Citizen of Europe, Not as Frenchman

Boyish-looking Robert Marjolin of France is Washington's most important and most brilliant visitor from Europe in many months.

During the war he worked obscurely here at the Willard Hotel as deputy to Jean Monnet, head of the French Supply Mission. Now he has become one of the first citizens of Europe, one of the first to speak not as a Frenchman but as a European.

The Washington Post
ROBERT MARJOLIN
Speaks as a European

He speaks for no one country in his present job as secretary-general of the 19-nation Organization for European Economic Cooperation, set up in Paris last year to carry out the European part of the Marshall Plan. He and his colleagues who have come to this country, Sir Edmund Hall Patch of Britain and Baron Snoy of Belgium, regard themselves as servants of the whole of Marshall Plan Europe.

Background and Philosophy

The secretary-general's international background and philosophy are likely to be important in Europe's future. He believes that the power of government must be used to stimulate the most efficient kind of production and that, on the factory level, free enterprise is the soundest foundation for a successful productive system.

ERP, in Marjolin's concept, should make America more socialistic, Europe more competitive, and the world freer.

At 37, Marjolin looks younger. Black-rimmed glasses and a taste for long Cuban cigars fail to make him professional. Between spending time with his wife and two small children, who live with him in the suburb of Neuilly, and long work hours, Marjolin has little or no leisure.

A native Parisian, the son of an upholsterer, he left grammar school at 14. For six years he worked in factories and offices by day and studied at night.

After a promising year at the University of Paris and a degree in philosophy, Marjolin won a Rockefeller scholarship to Yale University. He traveled throughout America on a sociology project.

Adviser to De Gaulle

He returned to Paris to win a doctorate in law at the Sorbonne in 1934 (since the war he has been made a professor of economics) and to become chief assistant to Prof. Charles Rist at the scientific institute of economic and social research. At that time, Marjolin was an ardent Socialist and served as economic editor for Leon Blum's socialist daily Le Populaire.

When the Germans occupied his country, Marjolin escaped to London and became an economic adviser to General De Gaulle. In 1943 he came to Washington and served as Free French delegate to the food and agriculture conference at Hot Springs. In 1944 he was appointed head of the French Purchasing Commission in America.

Despite attractive offers of jobs in American industry, he returned to Paris in 1945 to become first director of foreign economic relations at the Ministry of National Economy and then deputy to his wartime chief, Jean Monnet, as assistant administrator of the French recovery plan.

Marjolin's work as a delegate to the first Marshall Plan conference in Paris in the summer of 1947, as chief author of the "Paris Report" and of the treaty establishing OEEC, made him the unanimous choice as the new agency's secretary-general.

It was Marjolin who worked out a compromise on the division of the first year's dollar aid when differences between countries over their respective shares threatened to end OEEC for good.

It was he who insisted on writing a hard-boiled report on Europe's long-term planning that would leave no room for complacency about the work ahead. He came to Washington to make sure that report is understood.

Murray Sees Labor Beating Taft in 1950

New York, Jan. 12 (U.P.)—CIO President Philip Murray said tonight that Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), coauthor of the Taft-Hartley law, may be labor's chief victim in the 1950 elections.

He said in a speech prepared for delivery at a banquet sponsored by the Labor-and-the-Nation magazine that labor "defeated" Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in his presidential bid and can look forward to "other victories in 1950."

Jack Kroll, director of the CIO Political Action Committee, he added, "tells me that two years from now labor and the people of Ohio are going to win a very important seat in the Senate of the United States."

Murray did not mention Taft by name, but the veteran Ohio Republican is up for reelection two years hence.

Murray commended President Truman for "starting so early to carry out his campaign pledges to the people." Mr. Truman's "magnificent" State of the Union message, he said, contained many of the ideas which labor has been supporting for the past decade.

Murray declared that the Nation must build decent homes for the American people at once. He said:

"Our housing is indeed the shame of the Nation.

"It seems criminal to me that in Washington, D. C., our Capital, we can tolerate run-down slums within a block of two of the Capitol Building."

Taft-Hartley Repeal Hoped For by Spring

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act by spring—when the new round of wage negotiations gets underway—yesterday appeared to be the key to the strategy of the "Fair Deal" labor legislation program.

Representative John Lesinski (D., Mich.), chairman-designate of the House Labor Committee, hinted as much yesterday, after a conference with a delegation of AFL representatives.

The delegation called on Lesinski to express the AFL's protest against the "one-package" plan for the revision of national labor legislation. This single package would eliminate the Taft-Hartley Act, revive the Wagner Act, and modify the latter along the lines suggested by the President in his state of the Union message to Congress.

Both AFL and CIO prefer a "two package approch." The first measure would simultaneously knock off the Taft-Hartley Act and restore the Wagner Act. Then a second measure would be brought up to amend the Wagner Act.

Lesinski indicated yesterday, after the conference with the AFL delegation, that he was not intractable about the "one-package" approach. When Lewis G. Hines, AFL legislative representative, commented that delay in getting rid of the Taft-Hartley Act would put the unions at a disadvantage in negotiating new contracts with management, Lesinski said:

"If it takes too long to work out amendments to the Wagner Act, we will leave the amendments until later. We don't want to interfere with labor's coming agreements."

Arlington to Hold Hearing on Trade Tax Amendments

The Arlington County Board will hold a public hearing at 8 p. m. January 26 on three amendments it wants in a proposed tax on businesses, professions and automobiles.

The three amendments, all of which were suggested during a public hearing late last year, provide:

1. That the tax include "every person in the business of renting houses, apartments or commercial property," who would pay an annual license tax of 15 cents for every $100 of gross receipts. (This would affect only those renting more than two dwelling units).

2. That non-resident dry cleaners, who do their cleaning at plants outside of Arlington, pay $250 annually for each "outlet" or store in Arlington, $100 for each additional outlet.

3. That non-resident merchants with "no regular place of business" in Arlington (such as bread or milk vendors with their plants outside the county) pay $250 for the first delivery vehicle, $100 for each additional vehicle.

Kidnap Case Figure, Lindbergh Meet Again

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 12 (U.P.) Charles A. Lindbergh, in Germany representing the Air Force Chief of Staff, met yesterday in Garmish-Partenkirchen with Brig. Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, deputy provost marshal and former New Jersey State police commissioner. Schwarzkopf was in charge of investigating the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

10% Fewer Strikes Last Year

There were 10 per cent fewer work stoppages in 1948 than in 1947, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday, on the basis of preliminary estimates.

Last year saw 3300 work stoppages due to labor-management disputes, involving two million workers, resulting in 34 million man-days of idleness.

In 1947 there were 3693 stoppages, affecting 2,170,000 employes and causing 34,600,000 man-days of idleness.

Worst year in American history was 1946, with nearly 5000 strikes, involving 4,600,000 wage-earners, and creating 116 million man-days of idleness.

Despite the decline in strikes, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports, "the impact of last year's labor-management difficulties upon the Nation's economy was probably as great, or greater, than in 1947."

This comment was the closest the bureau came to evaluating the effect of the Taft-Hartley Act, passed in 1947, on the national strike picture.

Ex-U. S. Aide Held On Treason Charge

'No Communist' Wahrhaftig Doesn't Mind Loyalty Quiz

Westover Air Force Base, Mass., Jan. 12 (AP).—Sam L. Wahrhaftig, American political adviser in Germany, reported back to the United States today and said he didn't know anything about a loyalty check but would not object to one because he's no Communist.

Wahrhaftig

The 38-year-old Polish-born member of Gen. Lucius D. Clay's staff flew here from Frankfurt where Army officials refused to discuss his case.

In Washington, however, Army officials said they planned a "full investigation" of Wahrhaftig, who served as a civilian after United States Army duty during the war.

Wahrhaftig told newsmen that eight years ago he registered for one election with the American Labor Party of New York—a group he said he understood was listed as subversive recently by the United States Attorney General. (The A. L. P. is not on the list).

But, he said, he took no part in that organization's activities and added: "I was never a Communist."

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 12 (AP). U. S. Army officials are holding a former State Department employe here to face treason charges in America.

The 52-year-old onetime embassy clerk, Herbert John Burgman, is accused of having delivered propaganda broadcasts for the Nazis in World War II as a colleague of "Axis Sally."

Burgman, a native of Hokah, Minn., worked in the U. S. Embassy in Berlin for 20 years. He refused repatriation when America entered the war in 1941.

Arrested Second Time

Army officials said Burgman was arrested November 22 for the second time at request of the Justice Department in Washington. First seized after the end of the war, he was released after 19 months, but was required to report regularly to U. S. Military Police. For a time before his second arrest the MPs employed him as an interpreter. He has a German wife and 24-year-old son.

In Washington the Justice Department said he would be flown to America and held for grand jury action at the point of landing, which was not announced.

He has refused to talk to reporters.

Burgman, a veteran of World War I, was turned loose after his first arrest at the same time that the Army freed Mildred Gillars and Donald Day, other Americans accused of broadcasting for the Germans.

The Gillars woman subsequently was rearrested, and awaits a treason trial in Washington January 24 on charges that she was "Axis Sally."

24 Called Traitors

The Justice Department said that altogether 24 persons have been indicted for treason, 12 of them for making enemy propaganda broadcasts.

Fourteen convictions have resulted; two of the accused died before they were arrested; three cases were dropped for insufficient evidence, and the others await trial.

Ezra Pound, the poet, is in a mental hospital, adjudged mentally incompetent to stand trial on charges that he broadcast for the Italians.

Only one death sentence has been pronounced so far.

The Japanese-American, Tomoye Kawakita, is under sentence to be hanged for running a wartime factory in Japan, and abusing American prisoners employed in it.

Martin James Monti, an ex-soldier accused of deserting to the Germans with an American plane, applying for membership in Hitler's Elite Guard and broadcasting Nazi propaganda, is to be tried January 17 in Brooklyn.

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Felix A. Inslerman, 38-year-old electrical engineer under questioning by a spy-hunting Federal grand jury here, told reporters today he was employed by the Dakko Co., Baltimore, Md., manufacturer of photo-enlarging machines in 1937 and 1938.

His wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Alice Inslerman, was questioned for two and one half hours today by the jury. Inslerman testified before the jury on four days last week. He is an engineer for the General Electric Co. The Inslermans live in Cambridge, N. Y.

Inslerman said he was an assembler of enlargers for the Baltimore concern. He said he believed the compnay went out of business shortly after he left it. The company did not process films, he said.

Inslerman told reporters he would stand by his statement of last week that "it was just a coincidence" when asked if he was the "Felix" mentioned by Whittaker Chambers, admitted former courier for a Communist spy ring, in testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Chambers told the committee he had given microfilmed copies of stolen State and Navy Department documents to two persons, one of whom was named "Felix."

Reporters asked him: "Would you deny that you are the 'Felix' mentioned by Mr. Chambers before the House committee?"

"I will stand on my original statement," he replied.

Inslerman said that after leaving the Dakko company he was employed by the Glen L. Martin Co., Baltimore airplane manufacturers, as an inspector of plane parts and that later he was employed on a "B-26 Marauder project."

Early in 1942 Inslerman said he left the Martin company and went to work as an inspector for the Republic Aviation Corp., Farmingdale, N. Y.

Mrs. Inslerman declined to answer questions but said she would return as a witness before the jury tomorrow.

Sen. Humphrey Is Named Acting Chairman of ADA

Hubert H. Humphrey, freshman Democratic Senator from Minnesota, was named acting chairman of the liberal anti-Communist organization, Americans for Democratic Action.

The former Minneapolis mayor succeeds Leon Henderson, onetime OPA chief, whose resignation become effective Saturday. Henderson is leaving because of the pressure of private business.

Humphrey was chosen by the ADA national board to serve at least until the organization's national convention in Chicago in April. He is expected to be named then as chairman.

Humphrey defeated Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) in the November 2 election after winning strong labor support.

3 Servicemen Arrested in Guam Slaying

Guam, (Thursday) Jan. 13 (AP).—Three United States servicemen "are being charged" with the kidnaping, rape and murder of Ruth Farnsworth, former Wac, the Governor of Guam announced today.

The 27-year-old San Francisco woman was seized the night of December 11 in a jade shop and was found next day in the jungle, unconscious, with her clothing torn. She died December 13.

Rear Admiral Charles A. Pownall, Governor of Guam, announced:

"The following persons have been placed under arrest and are being charged with the kidnaping, rape and murder of the late Ruth Farnsworth:

"Pvt. Calvin Dennis, 26, Frederick, Md.; Pvt. Herman T. Dennis, 20, Indianapolis, Ind., and Staff Sergt. Robert W. Burns, 32, Spokane, Wash.

"The arrests were made possible by admissions obtained from Calvin and Herman Dennis, brothers, by the Guam police."

Lieut. Comdr. James T. Hackett, assistant police chief, said discovery of a smock belonging to Miss Farnsworth helped break the case.

"It was found in a car of which Calvin Dennis was the driver," Hackett said.

$373 Million 1949 Goal of Jewish Appeal

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 12 (AP).—Agencies of the United Jewish Appeal announced today they will need almost 373 million dollars in 1949.

The agencies told the opening session of the UJAs tenth annual conference they will require these sums of money:

The Joint Distribution Committee—$70,086,400 to help empty European displaced persons camps of about 120,000 Jews and to rehabilitate needy Jews in North Africa.

The United Palestine Appeal—$291,246,000 to absorb 180,000 Jews in Israel this year and to help develop the Negev desert to settle "hundreds of thousands of Jews."

The United Service for New Americans—$11,644,505 to support and train displaced Jews entering the United States.

In 1948 the UJA set 250 million dollars as its goal. It obtained 150 million dollars.

The organization is now without a general chairman. Former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., whose second term in that office expired December 31, was not present today.

Work Begins on Bay Bridge Linking Eastern Shore to West

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 12.—Work was inaugurated on the long-talked-of five-mile bridge across Chesapeake Bay today by Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., while American Federation of Labor pickets trudged with "unfair" signs less than 100 yards away.

The $37,500,000 bay bridge, dream of Maryland Governors since the start of the century, will connect the Eastern Shore of Maryland with the Western Shore at Sandy Point, opening up the markets of Baltimore and Washington to the Shore farmers and industry.

"We are met today on a historic occasion," Governor Lane told 1000 members of the General Assembly and other spectators gathered for the ceremony near the Sandy Point ferry slip.

"We are here to witness the accomplishment about which Marylanders have dreamed for more than 40 years. The commencement here today of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge will be a significant milestone in the cultural and economic history of Maryland," the Governor continued.

"At long last we are on the way to linking together, to the mutual benefit of all our citizens, the great Eastern and Western Shores of Maryland and binding closer the ties which through the years have held people together on the paths of progress," he said.

Governor Lane introduced Delaware Governor-elect Elbert N. Carvel, who expressed his State's appreciation for this "splendid forward-looking project," which he said would benefit the citizens of the entire Delmarva Peninsula.

Robert M. Reindollar, chairman of the Maryland State Roads Commission, opened the ceremony and introduced Governor Lane.

Others who spoke or who were introduced included Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro of Baltimore, Mayor William U. McCready of Annapolis, Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., superintendent of the United States Naval Academy, and five of the six Maryland members of the United States House of Representatives.

The Governor gave the order that started the giant crane digging the first scoop of earth for the construction of the bridge. Later he took the controls of the crane and dug several scoops for benefit of photographers.

Music was furnished by the Second Army Band from Fort George G. Meade.

Earlier the picket line at the bridge project was subject for discussion in the House of Delegates in Annapolis.

Delegate Benjamin A. Mrozinski, (D., 1st, Baltimore), chairman of the House labor committee, rose to call attention that a picket line had been established by the local carpenters' union to protest employment of Virginia workmen in the pile-driving operations. Majority Leader Leroy Pumphrey (D., Prince Georges), said he regarded the action a protest against a contractor and not against the State of Maryland.

The delegation from Allegany County, Mrozinski, and other individual members of the House remained away from the ceremony "in observance of the picket line." Senate Minority Leader Robert B. Kimball (R., Allegany) was one of the absent members of the Allegany delegation.

Mrozinski told the House that carpenters are contending that there are workers drawing unemployment compensation in Annapolis who are competent and willing to do the work for which the out-of-State workers were brought into Maryland.

No mention of the picketing was made in the course of the ceremony but afterward Chairman Reindollar told reporters that the contract for pile-driving requires the hiring of unskilled Maryland labor but does not mention skilled workmen.

The Nello L. Teer Co., of Durham, N. C., the construction company, brought its own skilled crews to handle work requiring skilled labor, he said.

Fort Myer's Hospital May Be Closed

Closing the station hospitals at Fort Myer, Va., and Andrews Air Force Base, Md., was recommended yesterday by a board named to study consolidation of medical facilities in the armed forces.

Under the proposal both posts instead would have dispensaries, which do not hospitalize patients. Men from Fort Myer would be sent to Fort Belvoir and those at Andrews to Bolling Field, the board suggested.

Officials said the recommendation on closing the Andrews Field hospital has been accepted and the change is already in process. No action has been taken as yet on the Fort Myer recommendation.

The report also proposed closing three large Army hospitals—the Naval Hospital at Pearl Harbor, T.H., the Army's McCornack General Hospital, Pasadena, Calif. and the Twenty-second (Army) General Hospital at Guam.

Dr. Paul R. Hawley, former chief medical director of the Veterans' Administration, heads the board. Other members are the surgeon generals of the Army, Navy and Air Force, Maj. Gen. R. W. Bliss, Rear Admiral Clifford A. Swanson, and Maj. Gen. Malcolm C. Grow.

Defense Secretary James Forrestal, who named the board, said he has not yet reviewed or approved the report. But he added that its recommendations indicate that important progress is being made toward effective coordination of the medical services of the armed forces.

The report proposes a 7000-bed cutback in military hospitals and greater exchange of patients between the services to more fully utilize remaining facilities.

It recommends reducing three other general hospitals to the status of station hospitals. They are at Anchorage, Alaska; Fort Totten, N. Y., and Camp Dix, N. J. Forty-eight station hospitals—including those at Andrews and Fort Myer—would be reduced to dispensaries.

It also suggested that patients from 38 military installations be treated at nearby hospitals of another service instead of being transported, as at present, to a more distant institution of the same service.

The board considered and rejected a proposal made recently by a committee of the Hoover Commission on Reorganization of the Government to merge most military hospitals with those of the Veterans Administration, Indian Bureau and Public Health Service under a civilian Department of Health.

"Tremendous administrative difficulties," such as record-keeping, would arise in sending soldiers and sailors to civilian hospitals, said the board.

Norway, Denmark Debate Choice of Alliance With Sweden or Joining North Atlantic Pact

London, Jan. 12 (AP).—Scandinavians debated a choice tonight between a Nordic alliance of Sweden, Norway and Denmark and a link with Western powers in the proposed North Atlantic Pact.

In Stockholm, the Swedish capital, a high diplomatic source said Sweden had offered the other two Scandinavian nations an iron-clad alliance as an alternative to the North Atlantic Pact. He said Sweden offered to throw her air, ground and naval forces to the support of either or both of the other countries in event of attack, and to help them build their own defenses from Swedish arsenals.

A Danish Foreign Office spokesman in Copenhagen said his country is most likely to choose the alliance with Sweden rather than the Atlantic Pact with the United States, Canada, Britain, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Sweden's offer may even make Norway change her attitude, the Danish spokesman was quoted.

At Stockholm the Swedish government announced it has called its ambassadors home from Washington, London, Paris and Moscow for talks. The reason for this was not disclosed.

The Norwegian ambassadors in Washington, Moscow and London and the Danish ambassadors in those three capitals and Paris were also called home.

Sweden is by far the strongest of the three Scandinavian countries with an air force ranking third in strength to those of Russia and Britain in Europe.

The foreign affairs experts of the three governments are scheduled to meet within the next 10 days for what a Copenhagen dispatch called "a general Nordic debate on the future of Scandinavia."

(At London, Scandinavian diplomats said efforts to set up a Swedish - Norwegian - Danish defense alliance have virtually collapsed. Desire of Norway and Denmark to link such an alliance with the America-led north Atlantic defense pact was said to have stalemated the talks.)

Norwegian Minister Assailed by Soviet

London, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—A Soviet publication called Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvard Lange a "warmongering, hysterically anti-Soviet stooge of Washington."

The attack, presumably was an effort to scare Norway out of joining the North Atlantic Pact.

The Moscow New Times today also accused the Swedish general staff of "waging propaganda for aggressive war against the Soviet Union."

Soviet to Use Police Dogs

Berlin, Jan. 12 (NYHT.).—A new note on police practice has been introduced in the Soviet sector of Berlin where certain policemen controlling the East-West border points will have police dogs to protect them against "civilian terror."

The police dog guard was disclosed today, after a series of incidents upsetting the Soviet sector police morale.

These incidents involved one case where a Soviet sector policeman trying to take a bag of potatoes from an elderly lady subway passenger was enthusiastically thrashed with an umbrella by the indignant white-haired woman as fellow-passengers held the policeman down.

group in about 10 days for a full airing of the problem.

"We will ask each service just what it thinks it needs for an adequate defense and how it would spend the money," said Vinson. "We will also ask each service how far short of an adequate defense it thinks the President's budget recommendations may fall. That includes a 70-group air force."

In another defense development, defense officials appeared before the Senate Armed Services Committee to discuss legislative plans. After the closed door session, it was revealed that a Forrestal proposal for legislation permitting military missions to be sent anywhere in the world was discussed.

Authority to send military advisers to various nations existed during the war, but has lapsed. Permanent law permits such missions in Latin America and the Philippines only.

Tientsin's People May Yield City

Nanking, Jan. 12 (AP).—Tientsin's surrender was believed being arranged today by representatives of citizens clamoring for peace after the garrison rejected Red terms.

The peace move by the people of Tientsin was watched closely. Some believe it may cut the pattern for an end of the civil war. Regional generals may seek a similar way out if the Tientsin deal works.

Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa in Peiping said there were trustworthy reports the Reds refused to compromise, called for Tientsin's answer within 24 hours, and underscored their ultimatum by firing shells into the city, causing quite a few casualties.

(The United States has received a secret communication on the China crisis from the Nationalist government in Nanking, Undersecretary of State Lovett disclosed yesterday.)

[The United Press said military sources reported Gen. Tu Yu-ming, one of China's great military heroes and leader of the trapped government forces below Suchow, has been captured by the Communists.

[The Communist radio said Tu was captured wearing the uniform of a private and that the last of his 25 surrounded divisions had been annihilated.

[Military sources here said two of Tu's leading generals, Chiu Ching-chuan and Li Mi, were missing.

[These sources said only 6000 of his 180,000 starving troops had survived the five weeks' encirclement.

Nations Face 'Austerity' Era

ments," said Marjolin, emphasizing that he spoke not as a Frenchman but as an official of an international organization. "The first step is to put things in order and make the export drive that is needed."

The role of the OEEC, he explained, would be to see that each European country did not damage its neighbors' interests in the coming effort to improve its position. In the depression of the 1930's, he recalled, almost every country tried to save itself by adopting policies that harmed its neighbors.

Marjolin insisted that OEEC had achieved important and genuine European cooperation in its first nine months of existence. He cited the division of American aid, the preparation of short-term and long-term programs for 19 nations, and especially the fact that national governments had freely disclosed confidential information about their own positions to other nations in the OEEC.

If the four-year report of the OEEC cited difficulties, Marjolin went on, it did so "not as an excuse for inaction but as an incentive to action" by the member governments.

Baron Snoy said there was "no precedent in history" for what the OEEC had been able to achieve in nine months. Until its establishment, he said, the nations involved had no machinery for cooperation at all.

Mexican GI To Be Buried At Arlington

A GI of Mexican ancestory who has been denied reburial facilities in his home town of Three Rivers, Tex., will be buried with military honors in Arlington National Cemetery.

Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.), said yesterday he arranged for the reburial after he was advised by the American GI Forum in Corpus Christi, Tex., that a Three Rivers funeral home had refused to handle the soldier's remains, "solely because of his Mexican ancestry."

The GI, Felix Lonforia, died in action on Luzon, in the Philippines.

The Senator said Dr. Hector Garcia, president of the Forum, told him in a telegram that the funeral home refused service because "other white people might object to use of the funeral home by people of Mexican origin."

Johnson arranged for Longoria's reinterment, without cost, either in Arlington or in Fort Sam Houston National Military Cemetery at San Antonia.

Mrs. Beatrice Longoria, the soldier's widow, notified the Senator she prefers Arlington.

The soldier's remains are scheduled to arrive via Army transport at San Francisco today. Final arrangements have not been completed.

Senator Johnson told Dr. Garcia: "I deeply regret to learn that the prejudice of some individuals extends even beyond this life.

New Greek Generalissimo Demands Lone Hand

Athens, Jan. 12 (AP).—The appointment of Gen. Alexander Papagos as generalissimo of Greek forces was held up today when he insisted on a free hand independent of the American and British military missions.

Yesterday War Minister Constantine Rentis announced the appointment of Papagos, credited with halting the Italian invasion of Greece in 1940-41.

It was disclosed today Papagos would not accept the post unless he is given full responsibility, and the Supreme Defense Council is abolished. United States Ambassador Henry F. Grady and the heads of the American and British military missions, are members of the council.

U. S. Notes Urged Caution in Mideast

The United States has repeatedly cautioned Britain, Egypt and Israel to show restraint over the Palestine situation, Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett disclosed yesterday.

Lovett said one such message of caution went to the British government as soon as the United States discovered that British troops were being sent to the Red Sea Port of Aqaba.

This was before the shooting down of five British planes by Israeli forces, an action which the State Department described as a "regrettable incident."

All the cautionary message were sent, said Lovett, in the hope that nothing would be done to upset the coming truce negotiations between Israel and Egypt on the Island of Rhodes.

Perplexing Dispatches

Lovett told his press conference he did not know the meaning of London dispatches referring to a deterioration of Anglo-American relations over the Palestine issue. He said American cooperation with all parties in the Palestine problem had been close and frank, because he felt sure all had the same objective of peace.

Answering questions, he said he did not regard the movement of British troops to Aqaba as a change in the "status quo" in Palestine. He though a change of troop dispositions in that area was obviously something within the sole competence of the British government.

He said the State Department had no information to support a Cairo report, attributed to a British military authority, that the planes shot down were on a United Nations errand at the time.

Lovett, Franks Confer

British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks discussed the Palestine situation with Lovett late in the day.

Lovett also discussed the Palestine situation with Eliahu Epstein, head of Israel's mission in Washington, and Aubrey Eban, Israeli representative at the U. N. Security Council.

Also conferring with Lovett was Samir Rifai Pasha, former Premier of Trans-Jordan and close friend of King Abdullah.

British Deny 'Menacing' Israel

is in charge of Britain's economic recovery, which is dependent upon American aid.

The Foreign Office spokesman's remarks clearly were intended to counter the growing anti-Bevin feelings in this country, the United States and France.

"We deny categorically, and have denied before the Security Council," the spokesman said, "that we have at any time sent any military supplies to any Arab state in contravention to the arms embargo.

Israel's Stand on Embargo

"Contravention of this embargo," he added, "has been undertaken in the interests of the Israeli government on a massive scale. I have so far seen no denial from the Israeli side of the charges we made recently about deliveries of arms from Czechoslovakia and other countries."

Replying directly to the Israeli charges of Britain's "menacing attitude" toward Israel, the spokesman continued:

"If there is a threat to peace, that threat derives from the persistent violations of the Security Council's truce by the Israeli authorities. I say that not only on the authority of His Majesty's government, but by virtue of the very precise information afforded to the U. N. by its acting mediator (Dr. Ralph Bunche)."

He said Britain had stopped the flow of British arms to the Arab states in spite of treaty obligations because it believed that "the denial of arms to the belligerents was the best way to restrict the conflict."

"It is a matter of lively regret," he added, "that other states have not shared that view."

He declined to name the "other states" besides Czechoslovakia, but he estimated that 90 per cent of the arms which have been sent to Israel came from eastern Europe. He said many of the shipments had been paid for with American dollars.

Criticism of U. S.

[The United Press said the Foreign Office spokesman criticized United States policy on Palestine. Calling for the carrying out in full of the United Nations Security Council resolutions to end Palestine warfare, the spokesman said: "The British government has noted with regret the apparent reluctance of the United States Government to range itself squarely behind these resolutions."

[The spokesman said that it seemed to be accepted among a great part of the American public that Britain's attitude was one of blind opposition of the Jews and of uncritical support of the Arabs. This view, he said, was inaccurate.]

[The Associated Press said Anthony Eden, No. 2 man in the Conservative Party, tonight denounced RAF flights over the Negev area as "entirely purposeless and deplorable." In a political talk at Warwick, Eden called the Friday attack on British planes by Israelis "an unwarranted and aggressive act." Then he asked, "Why were our aircraft sent to carry out a reconnaissance over a battle area in such conditions? What useful British purpose could be served?"

[Eden spoke after the British Air Ministry announced it was sticking to its story that British planes were over Egypt when they were shot down. The statement was occasioned by the fact that one of the downed pilots said at Tel Aviv today that his flight of four planes had crossed the frontier from Egypt and was within Israeli territory when attacked.]

Pilot's Story

He is Pilot Frank Harvey Close, 27, of London, attached to an RAF reconnaissance wing at a Suez Canal base.

He was interviewed by three correspondents—one American, one French, one English—in a Jewish Military Hospital near Tel Aviv. He is recovering from injuries suffered in a parachute landing.

Close said he knew his flight had crossed the border because he was familiar with road landmarks in the area—but he could not say whether his flight leader knew they had gone onto the Israeli side of the frontier.

"We had received information suggesting that Israeli forces had crossed into Egypt," he said. "We were instructed to photograph their advanced positions. There were four of us on the flight.

"We arrived at the front without seeing any troops at all, whereupon we crossed the frontier. I know the area. Whether our flight leader had instructions about crossing the border I don't know."

Israel-Egypt Truce Talks Start Today

Rhodes, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, United Nations Palestine mediator, announced today that armistice talks beteween Israel and Egypt would open at 11 a. m. Thursday (4 a. m. EST) under his supervision.

Bunche set the hour after the arrival of delegations representing Egypt and Israel.

He said the prospects looked "very promising."

Egypt's delegation was the first to get in today, in a United Nations plane. It was led by Col. Mohamed Ibrahim Seif ed-Dine and included Col. Mohamed Ramel el-Rahmani, Col. Ishmael Sherin and a high army staff officer.

This afternoon the Israelis arrived, led by Walter Eytan, secretary of the Tel Aviv Foreign Office. Other delegates were Elia Sasoon and Reuven Shiloah, of the Foreign Office and Col. Yigal Yadin, chief of military operations.

U. N. Council Sidesteps Israel-Britain Showdown

Lake Success, Jan. 12 (AP).—Security Council delegates sidestepped today a showdown in the council between Israel and Britain on the Palestine issue.

The Israeli complaint against Britain was filed yesterday. Today, 24 hours later, no council member had sponsored it, and demanded a meeting, as council rules require if a subject is to be considered.

Demand for Idle Pay Soars in Maryland, Tripling 1948 Figure, After Jobs Hit Peak

Baltimore, Jan. 12 (AP).—Hundreds of laid-off workers flocked to offices of the Maryland Employment Security Department for compensation checks last week, but officers were not disturbed about it.

Russell S. Davis, chairman of the Employment Security Board, said he had been assured by industry that the layoffs are a temporary seasonal development.

The bare figures look frightening, however.

Maryland paid out $443,342 in unemployment benefits last week to 22,768 claimants. In the corresponding week a year ago, some $139,000 was paid to 7571 claimants.

Davis himself didn't know exactly what to make of this. He noted a "persistent" increase in the number of those applying for unemployment compensation the past few weeks.

The number of applicants has more than doubled in the past three weeks.

Balanced against these figures was another set that shows employment in Maryland has recently been higher than ever before. The latest count shows that 722,800 persons were employed in non-agricultural work throughout the State as of November 15. A year earlier it was 688,100.

D. C. Jobless Payments Show No Important Rise

With Uncle Sam cited as "the great stabilizing influence," District Unemployment Compensation Board officials reported yesterday that jobless benefit payments here show no important increase.

For the first five days of this year, 3681 benefit checks, exclusive of GI checks, were issued for sums totaling $63,364. This represented an $8132 rise over the same period of last year, when 3337 checks were disbursed for $55,232.

A total of 3816 claims were filed from January 1 to 5 this year as against 3319 for the same period last year.

Officials stressed that new claims are not reflected in actual monetary figures until two or three weeks after filing.

Increases in jobless benefits are usually noted this time of the year, it was said, because of normal letdown of business activity after the holidays.

Officials pointed out that, unlike Maryland and Virginia, the District has no heavy industry to be affected by slumps. Some results of the industrial declines in nearby areas, however, are expected to be reflected in retail trade here, it was said, but, it was stressed, Government employment here acts as a brake.

N. Y. State Unemployment Increases 30% in Year

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Unemployment in New York State at the end of 1948 was about 30 per cent higher than a year ago, according to State Industrial Commissioner Edward Corsi.

The increase does not mean a recession is coming, however, Corsi said in an interview yesterday. "It is just a tapering off from record high employment levels," he declared.

Records at Corsi's office showed that 45,000 persons were added to the State unemployment insurance rolls last week, one of the largest increases in the 13-year histroy of the insurance system.

The rise brought the total drawing jobless insurance and veterans' readjustment benefits to 455,000, an increase of 65 per cent in the past three months.

Most of the increase in unemployment was registered in New York City.

Reserve Board Reviews Rules On Auto Credit

Demands for relaxation of credit restrictions on automobile purchases have resulted in a restudy of such regulations by the Rederal Reserve Board, it revealed yesterday.

One member of the board said that such studies are continuous; another spokesman said that a restudy is being made now of regulation W, which sets up installment rules, and its effect upon the motor car industry.

Leading a chorus of complaints yesterday against the effects of regulation W was Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.), a member of the House Banking Committee. Previously, Henry Kaiser, head of the Kaiser-Frazer Corp., had announced credit restrictions had so reduced sales that his company was considering a cut-back in production of about one-third. The National Association of Automobile Manufacturers also announced it had asked for a modification in the Reserve Board's rules.

"Thousands of telegrams and letters have poured into my office from dealers in every make of automobile," Patman declared. "The Federal Reserve Board is depriving millions of Americans from owning autos they need and want to buy.

"Two auto manufacturers already have announced cutbacks in production and employment. Parts manufacturers, in turn, are being forced to cut back.

"The board already has the authority immediately to extend the present 18-month payment period for autos. It is my feeling that an extension to 24 or 30 months should be made.

"The board, in effect, is soaking the poor and favoring the rich. It is forcing families to pay more than $100 a month installments to buy a medium-priced car. That means the overwhelming majority of Americans who earn less than $5000 a year are forced out of the market."

Truman Reassures Civil Rights Group

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday told the National Citizens Council on Civil Rights that legislation to effect his broad civil rights program is now being prepared.

Herbert Bayard Swope, who headed a council delegation which called on the President at the White House, said Mr. Truman told them the proposed legislation will go to Congress "as soon as it is drafted."

The council presented to President Truman its recommendations for the permanent Federal Commission on Civil Rights, which the President unsuccessfully urged of Congress last February 2, as the first plank in his 10-point civil rights program.

Three Members Preferred

As recommended by the council, the commission would consist of paid, full-time members, preferably three, with a national and regional staffs. The commission would have power to "investigate, subpena witnesses, take testimony and hold public hearings" throughout the United States and its possessions in all fields involving civil rights.

In addition to Publicist Swope, the delegation which called on the President included former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson; Msgr. Maurice S. Sheehy of Catholic University; Edward McGrady, vice president of the Radio Corporation of America; George Field, executive secretary of Freedom House; Morris L. Ernst, attorney and writer, and Leo M. Cherne, executive secretary of the Research Institute of America.

Swope termed the President's civil rights program the "most courageous thing done since Abraham Lincoln," while Patterson declared, "We pledged the President our support and the most energetic efforts to back up this legislation."

Meets With Committee

Immediately afterward, Mr. Truman had his first official meeting with the President's Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Services, which is headed by Charles Fahy, former Solicitor General.

When he created this seven-man group by executive order last July, President Truman said it would confer with the Secretaries of Defense, Army, Navy and Air, to consider plans to remove discrimination in the armed forces.

Secretary Forrestal, who with the other Secretaries was present at yesterday's meeting, termed the session an exploratory one. Fahy said the group would meet immediately to plan its course of action, and it would be "a matter of some months" before a report is ready.

In addition to Fahy, committee members are: Charles Luckman, president of Lever Bros.; A. J. Donahue, Stamford, Conn.; John H. Sengestacke, publisher of the Chicago Defender; William E. Stevenson, president of Oberlin College; Lester Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League, and Dwight R. G. Palmer, president of the General Cable Co.

To Legislature

White Rule Plan Offered By Talmadge

Atlanta, Jan. 12 (AP).—Gov. Herman Talmadge's forces introduced a four-point white supremacy program in the Georgia Legislature today, including a revival of the poll tax.

To curb what Talmadge repeatedly has denounced as "Negro bloc voting," his legislative lieutenants submitted a series of measures which would revise completely Georgia voting mechinery. The 1945 Legislature repealed the old poll tax law.

Outline of Program

The program, which brought warnings of "machine domination of Georgia" by one lawmaker, called for:

1. Wiping out the State's complete current list of 1,200,000 registered voters, including about 150,000 Negroes.

2. Undertaking a new registration under tightened machinery and procedure. Voters would be required to register again every two years—permanent registration lists would be abolished.

3. Each registration would require a $1 fee from the prospective voter or he would be disqualified.

4. An amendment to the Georgia constitution inserting a requirement that applicants to vote must "explain in a simple, fair and reasonable manner" any section of the State or Federal constitution.

Secretary of State Ben Fortson, who administers present registration laws, said the program would cut Georgia's voting list more than half.

Machine Control Seen

Representative Charles Gowen, an anti-Administration leader, charged the proposals "would set Georgia back half a century. By reducing the number of voters to a minimum, they would pave the way for machine control of the State for many years."

Another measure from the Talmadge camp would extend Georgia's unique county unit voting system to the general election. It now applies only to Democratic primaries. Each of Georgia's 159 counties is assigned a certain "unit vote." The candidate winning a majority of popular votes in the county gets all of that county's unit votes.

Elections would be determined by a majority of unit votes. The system retains potent political power in small rural counties.

Amateur Hour Aired From Washington

The original Amateur Hour was broadcast over ABC to 170 cities from Constitution Hall last night in a salute to Washington as "honor city of America."

Half of the gross receipts of the three-hour show, broadcast between 8 and 9 p. m., will go to the National Symphony Orchestra Association, sponsor of the event along with the greater national Capital Committeee of the Board of Trade. Radio Station WMAL and television station WTTG.

Ted Mack, master of ceremonies and successor to the late Major Edward Bowes, received a message welcoming him to Washington from Leon Chatelain, president of the Board of Trade.

The program will be carried on Dumont television Sunday evening.

Amateur performers from New York City appeared on the program. Emphasis was placed on the many tourist attractions which Washington affords.

MRS. ROOSEVELT SPEAKS—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt discusses the speech she made last night at Howard University with Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president

U.N. Rights Declaration Worth Quoting, Mrs. Roosevelt Says

The U. N. Declaration of Human Rights must become a familiar and oft-quoted document, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt told the Howard University School of Social Work last night, so that it will carry great moral, if not legal, weight throughout the world.

Mrs. Roosevelt, chairman of the U. N. Commission on Human Rights, spoke to a capacity audience at the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel.

Warning that the declaration was only half of the Commission's goal, she urged the audience to get back of the covenant, which the Commission would write at the next session of the U. N.

This covenant, she said, which will be a 'egally binding document, much like a treaty, affirming international rights and containing powers of implementation, must be ratified quickly by the United States or no other countries will consider ratifying it.

And this covenan. might well be the instrument of perpetual peace, Mrs. Roosevelt said, because it will for the first time establish rights to which all countries subscribe.

The former President's widow told several anecdotes to illustrate the difficulty of getting 58 nations to agree to anything. Some countries insisted on including words which could not be translated into the English language.

Whereas the United States Constitution says that all men are "created" equal, Mrs. Roosevelt said the U. N. Declaration of Rights had to say that all men were "born equal, for some nations would not agree to the principle of a divin creator.

She said that the opposition of Soviet Russia to "so many things" probably has a valuable effect.

"Their opposition makes us think each problem through," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "It teaches us to compromise, if necessary, and forces us to take a positive stand on questions which we think important."

Market Razing Plan Before Commissioners

District Commissioners are expected to consider shortly a proposal for razing the present Western Market building at 21st and K sts. nw. and leasing the land to a group of investors for erection of a combination parking-public market structure.

A snag in the project is what to do with No. 3 Police Precinct Station now located in the building, according to Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox, assistant Engineer Commissioner. Cox said the city heads will have to decide whether the police station should be included in the new structure or be located on another site, if the conversion plan is agreed upon.

Horatio Alger Found Stranger To 9 of 10 Boys

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Ninety-one per cent of American boys today have never heard of Horatio Alger, the Children's Aid Society regretfully reported today.

The society said they polled 85 10 to 15-year-old boys, a cross-section of their 10,000 members. Only four youngsters had read one or more of Alger's rags-to-riches book. Another five had heard of him but had never read any of his novels. The other 74 had no idea who he was.

The society said that 63 per cent of the boys questioned knew all about Al Capp's shmoos.

Alger lived for many years at a Newsboys' House founded by the Children's Aid Society.

His brother, James C. Hodge, 29, was sent to the District Jail yesterday to await grand jury action following a coroner's inquest.

Rape Intent Case Upset In Alabama

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 12 (AP).—A Negro, convicted of intent to rape a white woman although he didn't touch her or even try to, won a reversal today in the Alabama Court of Appeals.

The tribunal set aside the six-year prison term given Zear McCollum, 25, of Tuscaloosa County and sent the case back to the lower court. Judge Robert B. Harwood said the trial judge should have granted the Negro's motion for a new trial.

McCollum was charged with assault with intent to rape a 33-year-old housewife last June 12. The woman testified the Negro, crippled from birth, came into her yard and told her "You know what I come for."

The remarks, Judge Harwood said could "never amount to an assault" and "are not in themselves indecent," although a jury might reasonably infer that they were insulting in character."

Trial By Jury

The trial—to dignify it by the familiar word for procedure in a court of justice—of William Howell in Lyons, Ga., might have come straight from Gilbert and Sullivan except for its squalid perversion of moral and legal principles. In conformity with the laws of Georgia, and of light operas, defense counsel called two members of the jury to the stand. They had been picked for the jury because they attested their "impartiality," another musical comedy touch. But as leading witnesses for the defense they both declared they would not in any case believe the sworn testimony of the chief prosecution witness, who identified Howell as one of the lynch mob that killed her husband last November.

As to the lawfulness of this procedure, Georgia law is curiously primitive. There is no statutory barrier against it. As to its propriety, however, there ought to be no question. For failing to call a mistrial, regardless of the sanction given by the vagaries of State law, the judge showed an astounding disrespect for both the forms and substance of justice under the common law. It is, of course, too much to expect that he will be removed from the bench for grossly defiling it, though everyone connected with the trial could be easily proved guilty of doing practical violence to the tenet of "white supremacy" they thought to serve.

New D. C. Council

Washington is fortunate in the selection of legislators to serve on the Senate District Committee for the next two years. Senator J. Howard McGrath, the new chairman, is an alert and liberal-minded legislator who may be expected to put a good deal of drive behind needed legislation and the movement for home rule. Senator Kefauver is well known as a friend of the District and a legislator of superior ability from his service in the House. Senator Margaret Chase Smith likewise brings to the committee a sound background of legislative know-how and a favorable disposition toward home rule. While Senator Hunt, former Governor of Wyoming, and Senator Andrew Schoeppel of Kansas are newcomers to Washington, both come highly recommended and have already expressed themselves as favorable to the District's aspirations for self-government. A majority of the committee members are committed to home rule for the District, and of course none of the others can oppose it without running counter to the platform pledges of the two major parties.

It is chiefly to this group that the community must look for advancement of the home-rule cause in the present session. We think that cause is in good hands and hope that the committee will bring out a home-rule bill promptly so as to avoid its defeat by the pressure of other legislation, as happened in the House last year. Senator McGrath will be in a most favorable position to work with the President on a home-rule bill. The important thing now is to get the community working with him also. This could best be accomplished, in our opinion, by naming an outstanding citizen of Washington to the Board of Commissioners to take the lead in bringing about the restoration of suffrage and modernization of the local government. The President will have an opportunity to make such an appointment at the expiration of Commissioner John Russell Young's term this spring. Meanwhile, a search for the best man to fill this assignment could well begin with the specific understanding that the chief task of the new appointee would be to sponsor and aid the home-rule movement.

Arms For Whom?

President Truman's proposals for military aid to foreign countries were so generalized that informed discussion will have to await the details of just what he has in mind. It would be highly unfortunate, however, if his remarks were to be viewed as a loophole for revival of the hemisphere arms standardization program energetically propounded by our military men a year or so ago. For if anything has been demonstrated by the series of army uprisings in Latin America, it is that Latin militarism could easily subvert from the inside the hemisphere security we are seeking.

The United States already is supplying limited quantities of arms to Latin America. For example, the report of the Chief of Staff of the Air Force tells how during fiscal 1948 225 planes "were removed from storage, reconditioned, and delivered to various American Republics." Actually these planes were surplus property handled by the Foreign Liquidation Commission. To augment these with other arms under whatever pretext would be to increase the power of the military in Latin America at a time when the big problem is how to get Latin armies to respect the authority of elected governments. Certainly the State Department, which has initiated talks on means to quarantine the threat, could not indorse a move that would merely add to the danger of oppression. Before we give military aid to any quarter, we want to make doubly sure that the purposes for which it may be used are not contrary to the principles we are upholding.

Spearhead Of Reform

Mr. Arthur Krock of the New York Times reports that the Hoover Commission has been debating whether it should take a stand on a constitutional amendment to rescue the treaty-making process from the two-thirds rule in the Senate. It is said that after discussion the commission favored a constitutional amendment providing that treaties should become effective upon approval of majorities in the House and Senate. No such recommendation is likely to be made, however, according to Mr. Krock, because the problem lies outside of the assignment of the Hoover Commission.

This newspaper for a number of years has urged the Senate to end minority control over the treaty-making power. We should not, however, like to see the good work the Hoover Commission appears to be doing toward reorganization of the executive branch of the Government jeopardized by any proposal beyond its authority. What the commission's apparent decision to remain silent on the treaty-making power suggests is that some other body ought to be at work on constitutional issues of this sort. Surely organic defects in our governmental system are as worthy of exploration by statesmen and experts as the organization of bureaus and departments.

The two-thirds rule in the Senate is only one of several major constitutional problems. Another is improvement of our outmoded electoral system. A third is the shaping of an easier method of amending the Constitution so that Presidents and legislators will not be tempted to use undemocratic short cuts to constitutional reforms. The correction of these defects in the existing organic law would be a task worthy of the best minds in America.

We suggest that Congress give serious consideration to the creation of a counterpart to the Hoover Commission—a body that would represent both the legislative and executive branches and would also draw from private life men of the caliber of former Supreme Court Justice Roberts, former Secretary of State Byrnes, President Conant of Harvard, John Lord O'Brian, and Charles Warren, the historian of the Supreme Court and the Constitution. Such a commission could become an invaluable spearhead of the movement for much-needed constitutional reforms.

Crucifying The Truth

In all the criticisms of the press that come from such pundits as Dr. Hutchins, nothing is said about its problems. One of the major ones is how to deal with the disingenuousness with which officials obscure the facts from inquiring reporters. On the Palestine situation the facts have been misrepresented constantly. A blatant example occurred in a Cairo dispatch to the New York Times on Tuesday. Cabled the Times correspondent: "Discussing last Friday's air clash a British military source asserted today that the reconnaissance was being carried out over Egypt only on behalf of United Nations observers." The dispatch seemed so extraordinary on its face, and, if true, would have warranted immediate revision of editorial comment, that we wired to Mr. Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations, and asked whether the statement was correct. The reply came as follows: "Information suggested your telegram to effect that British planes were carrying out reconnaissance on behalf United Nations' observers incorrect." To add to the sorry tale, the Air Ministry in London stands accused of falsification by the confession of one of the British pilots that his plane was hit not over Egypt, as the Ministry asserted, but over Palestine.

At about the same time Dr. Jessup at Lake Success was pointedly questioning the veracity of the Dutch on the release and the whereabouts of the Indonesian leaders. Dr. van Royen had told the Security Council they were all on the Island of Banka. It turns out that only Premier Hatta is there. The others, President Soekarno, Foreign Minister Salim, and Sjahrir are at Prapat. Dr. Jessup also made an acid comment about later assurances that the leaders had been released. The fact is they are still in custody, held incommunicado from the U. N. Good Offices Committee, and it is our conclusion that the purpose of separating them physically is to try to soften Hatta's intransigence.

The fact that such misstatements can be made is evidence of a growing immorality. By no means do we suggest that American officials are above prevarication; no reporter in the Capital would give officialdom a clean bill of health in this regard. In the old days "No comment" served to cloak disagreeable or embarrassing facts, but the old days seem to have gone forever, and an untruth is uttered without a blush. Truly Hitler, Lenin and the rest who made a virtue of the lie are more influential than they realized, and the practice makes the responsibility of a newspaper to its readers the more difficult.

Shigemitsu Travesty

Readers with acquaintance of Mamoru Shigemitsu's work in Peking, Moscow, London and Tokyo have expressed sympathy with our plea that he should be pardoned. The trouble is that most of them are holding positions which forbid public communications. However, Mr. Joseph C. Grew, former Ambassador to Japan, whose cable to this newspaper appears in an adjoining column, is under no such restraint. And what he says about Shigemitsu is echoed by many other persons equally knowledgeable.

The performance in Tokyo was altogether different from the proceedings at Nuernberg. We supported the trial at Nuernberg, in great part as the result of the cogent arguments of Mr. Stimson. Nuernberg rested upon a conspiracy by the Nazi gang, but there was no similar conspiracy in Japan, just an old-fashioned plan for war determined upon by the Supreme Command. Other participants, even the navy, "went along" with the dominant army clique, because dissidence from the prevailing opinion is non-Japanese. As for the proceedings, there were 11 judges at Tokyo, mostly men of small caliber. The president of the tribunal, the Australian Sir William Webb, was conscientious, but observers say that he so far forgot his function that from time to time he descended to the advocate's level. In addition, the protracted hearing was weighted by several devices in behalf of the prosecution, and the rules of the court depended upon the judges in attendance.

The fact that the chief prosecutor, Mr. Joseph B. Keenan, says that Shigemitsu should not have been put on trial, let alone convicted, is the best testimony to the Shigemitsu travesty. Shigemitsu is a proven friend of the Western World. We dare say that, in spite of the injustice which has been done to him, he is still our friend. It is upon men like him that we ought to be depending for the guidance of Japan back to paths of peace and cooperation. It is to be hoped that the character references which must have piled up on General MacArthur's desk, aside from the intrinsic merits of his case and the manner of the trial, will bring him the supreme commander's pardon.

Tax On Bigness

A correspondent whose letter appears on this page today has some harsh things to say about an editorial criticizing Representative Monroney's proposal to impose a graduated tax on corporate incomes ranging from 10 per cent to 50 per cent—the maximum rate, to be applied to all incomes in excess of two million dollars. First of all, he points out that the present 38 per cent tax on corporate income bears no relationship to capital investment and for that reason is as inequitable in principle as a 50 per cent tax. Consequently, our correspondent concludes that this newspaper is guilty of inconsistency in arguing that a flat increase in present tax rates would be infinitely better than the Monroney proposal if it should be necessary to impose heavier taxes on corporations.

The answer is that a flat rate increase would not aggravate the inequities of the present tax system to any such extent as would the system of graduated rates advocated by Mr. Monroney. The Washington Post admits that a flat rate system of corporate taxation based on size of net earnings without regard to capital investment is unfair. But it is not as indefensible as a graduated system of rates imposed with reference solely to the size of income. What is needed, as we stated in the editorial in question, is a thoroughgoing reform of the present system that would eliminate double taxation of stockholders. The reference to flat rate increases did not imply approval of the present system.

Moreover, editorial criticism of taxes designed to penalize bigness does not imply ignorance of the fact that the present corporation tax is graduated in the lower income brackets, the 38 per cent rate becoming applicable to corporations with net incomes of $50,000 or more. While this partial system of graduation is, in our opinion, logically indefensible, it is generally regarded as a form of tax relief, for the benefit of small businesses. Space did not permit discussion of this feature of the present tax system. Nor was it considered necessary to do so in order to drive home the point that the editorial tried to make: namely, that a graduated system of corporate taxes based on size of income is a tax on bigness as such that does grave injustice to thousands of low-income stockholders of companies having to pay these top-notch tax rates.

The animus of our correspondent is clear; he wants to apply punitive taxes to large corporations. The fact that taxes collected from such corporations are "ultimately (perhaps)" paid by individual stockholders does not, he says, "gainsay the much more significant fact" that as a result of corporate growth, ownership is almost necessarily separated from control, thereby permitting a few persons to "extend their economic influence far beyond the assets under their direct ownership."

Granting the thesis, The Washington Post does not agree that the tax system should be used as an instrument of destruction to tear down large corporate establishments. The abuses of bigness, such as monopolistic practices or restraint of trade, are subject to curbs under our antitrust laws. When the public welfare is menaced by large corporate entities, the remedy lies in invoking such laws. It does not lie in efforts to tear down good and bad corporations alike by destructive forms of taxation, applied without discrimination and without regard to the adverse effect on the incomes of the thousands of individuals who are owners of corporate stocks.

Zacharias' Estimate

May I reply to Admiral Zacharias' ad hominen onslaught of January 3 in these columns?

The admiral, it seems, was upset because I was rash enough to take him to task for views which (according to the Associated Press—here in Schenectady, at least) he had expressed in the January issue of the United Nations World as to Japan's staying powers at the time of the Yalta Conference.

Admiral Zacharias' response to my comments, unfortunately, was confined to an extensive—and, incidentally, surprisingly inaccurate—survey of my former wartime and postwar services, which he had dug up, apparently at second hand and to which he had added a number of wholly gratuitous slurs. But I fail to see how that record, even as thus distorted by the admiral, has any real bearing on the objections which I offered to what was reported to be his point of view.

Briefly, according to the press account, the admiral contends that the President and the Joint Chiefs of Staff decided to bring the USSR into the Pacific war because of an intelligence estimate crediting Japan with "5,000,000 officers and men," in contrast to the admiral's personal guess of "2,000,000 effective combat troops." On the strength largely of this difference, so it was reported, the admiral now undertakes, well after the fact, to criticize the Joint Chiefs decision.

In my humble judgement it scarcely requires any abstruse or esoteric knowledge of Japan to make the purely logical point that before this critique can be taken seriously, two further points must be made clear: (a) What evidence available in February, 1945, suggested to the admiral that with fewer numbers the Japanese would elect not to defend their homeland in the usual costly way? (b) Would the admiral, had he himself been the responsible commander at the time, really have been willing to gamble hundreds of thousands of American lives on this evidence?

If the full text of the article, which is not available here, contains the answers to these questions, then I have indeed spoken hastily. In that event, since the newspaper story probably had wider circulation than the article itself will have, Admiral Zacharias may find it helpful to clarify his position in the press.

"Meeting The 81st"

Your editorial, "Meeting the Eighty-first," of January 6, does you no credit for truth, honesty or good taste.

You state that Mr. Truman recommended Taft-Hartley repeal "though with the proviso that most of the provisions of the law shall be enacted along with the Wagner Act."

Such wishful thinking on your part has no foundation in fact. By no stretch of the imagination can Mr. Truman's recommendations concerning changes in the Wagner Act be distorted to include the demonstrably vicious and unfair provisions of the repudiated Taft-Hartley law.

The President, a few months ago, made certain pledges to the people. He made pledges to labor, to the farmers, to the homeless, to those in need of medical care, to those seeking a fairer deal for their efforts.

When now, like the honest man he is, the President seeks to make good on his pledges The Washington Post joins the chorus of those who shout "tool" at any person who acts on behalf of someone other than themselves.

Labor, I think, is the first group to recognize that the President is the Chief Executive of us all and we have never sought from the President or the Congress legislation that would be at the expense of the Nation as a whole. Yet we are also well aware that a hurt to any of us is a hurt to all of us; that when the farmer's income sinks so low that he is unable to buy the product of the city worker, the city worker suffers as much as the farmer.

Cyprus Refugees

While we protest Russia's failure to release German prisoners of war, let us not forget that the victims of these Germans still languish in British prisons on the island of Cyprus. I have not heard of any protests from our State Department to the British government on the behalf of these unfortunates who were apprehended entering the country of Israel.

Our former allies compete with us in trying to aid our former enemies, but the Nazis' victims are thrown upon the mercy of an unmerciful world.

Fairfax High Schools

Although the comments made by the superintendent of Fairfax County schools in rebuttal of the arguments set forth by the joint P-TA committee to show need for a high school for colored pupils were not false, they were misleading.

The superintendent indicated that the 230 students now attending Manassas would not justify a high school for them within the county. He did not refer to the 60 to 70 pupils who now pay tuition in Washington. Nor does this figure represent those who have dropped out because of the hardships or expense not incurred by white children.

The superintendent did not reveal that although he opposes a high school for 300 children, he is asking for nearly a million dollars to make additions to the Herndon High School which has fewer children. There are four high schools for white children of which two are modern, and over two million dollars is being asked to improve these schools.

The superintendent was quoted as saying the action to make Manassas a regional high school was taken, "after the advice . . . of the colored citizens of Fairfax." He did not add that at that time, 10 years ago, there was no high school education available within the county and several hundred colored children were going to the Washington schools, and that just about 60 children, most of them in the far western part of the county, went to Manassas.

No court in the land would submit that children forced to travel nearly a hundred miles a day, for five hours after walking several miles to the bus stops, could possibly receive education equal to that furnished children who go to one of the four high schools situated strategically about the county of Fairfax.

"Tax On Bigness"

The antediluvian opinion expressed in your January 2 editorial, "Tax on Bigness," is startling to find in an up-to-the-minute paper. Although the Monroney plan to impose a graduated income tax on corporate income in lieu of a renewed excess profits tax may be subject to criticism, it certainly stands up well under the arguments you advance.

First, your anxiety that "it would take away half of the earnings of a large income recipient" regardless of the relationship of those earnings to capital investment is no more than saying that the present tax which takes away, not half, but 38 per cent is inequitable for the same reason. Yet you argue at a later point in the editorial for a flat across-the-board increase in present rates if additional revenue is necessary.

Second, you suggest that a lower tax on small corporations than that imposed on big corporations "simply penalizes bigness and has no place in a system of taxation supposedly adjusted with some reference to ability to pay." This seems to indicate a complete misunderstanding of the present corporate tax which is graduated from 21 per cent on corporate incomes of $5000 and less up to the flat 38 per cent imposed on corporations having net incomes of more than $50,000. Moreover, "ability to pay" of both individuals and corporations under our system is determined by net income and not, as the editorial writer seems to suggest, on the individual's or the corporation's capital investment.

But the important vice in the editorial seems clearly to lie in its criticism of a "tax on bigness." I had thought it an accepted economic fact that "size alone gives to giant corporations a social significance not attached ordinarily to smaller units of private enterprise."

The fact that ultimately (perhaps) the taxes collected from corporations are—as the editorial states—"really paid by individual stockholders" does not gainsay the much more significant fact that, as a consequence of corporate growth, ownership of large size corporations (such, for example, as would be earning incomes above two million dollars which would be subject to 50 per cent tax by the Monroney bill) is almost of necessity separated from control permitting those few persons who gain such control to extend their economic influence far beyond the assets under their direct ownership.

Finally, another economic fact no longer subject to debate is that coincident with the growth of the corporation there has occurred a significant concentration of individual wealth.

All this is simply to say that the crocodile tears shed in your editorial for the nameless thousands of individual stockholders who own these "impersonal entities" might well be spared instead for those low bracket individuals who probably suffer from far greater tax injustices.

Professional Career Craze

By Malvina Lindsay

'Blue Collar' Bogey

THE AMERICAN dream of success needs some renovation, it is beginning to be recognized, now that the American way of life is receiving so much scrutiny abroad, being talked about so much at home.

That dream in its original essence was that any mother's son might be President. Later it became more generally the idea that anybody—or rather everybody—could strike it rich. Now it is youth picturing itself as a $25,000-a-year lawyer, engineer, scientist, or business executive.

Even Prince Charming has gone professional. A recent study of marriage attitudes of young women in several colleges in the State of Washington showed that first choice of a husband was a professional or semiprofessional man, with a businessman second — though most of the girls with farm backgrounds gave second place to farmers.

Youth's widespread aspiration to be a man or woman of the professions, or possibly the arts, is making employment experts uneasy. For only about 3 per cent of all occupations are professional. And the next few years will see a great influx into the professional market of highly trained veterans from the colleges.

SOME educators also are concerned as they see connection between this dream and the fact that more than half of youngsters who start high school drop out before graduation. This desertion, they say, is largely because of the "choking hold of the myth of white-collar superiority" on the curriculum, causing it to be largely directed toward preparation for college and for professional life.

Students who lack aptitude or ability for the professions often find their schooling boring and frustrating. Yet, if they leave school and become "blue-collar" workers, or low-scale, white-collar ones, they are likely to get too little out of life and contribute too little to it, since they have not been trained in working or consumer habits, for citizenship, and for creative use of leisure time.

Another group frustrated by the professional dream consists of those who go through high school, and even college, with ambitions they cannot realize. When they fail to become the topnotch high-salaried men or women they have counted on being they are discontented. Aspiring to join the professional samurai of the day, they disdain the opportunities that blue-collar work offers in a technological era.

Yet in a free country people can't be told to do this or that according to their aptitudes or the Nation's needs. Nor can the American dream, source of much creative accomplishment, be lost.

ONE WAY of helping youths who have fantastic dreams of their future is being increasingly tried out in colleges. Students are given opportunity to make long-term studies of themselves, their abilities and aspirations in relation to the pursuits open to them. The job picture is realistically presented, but they are not discouraged from aiming high. Such programs together with widespread vocational guidance and aptitude testing should keep many square pegs out of round holes.

How to make contented the man who must give up his dream of seeing his name on a glass door and instead work in a machine shop is something else. The answer lies largely in giving him creative interests for his leisure time, which is expected to increase with technological progress. Such a job is largely up to the school, though community organizations can help.

But if the American dream is to be salvaged it will also mean a general cultivation of new social attitudes. The cherished myth that those who "get to go to college" have a passport to social prestige and money success will finally have to be laid. So will the present one that only he who attains eminence in the professions (or possibly in the business world if he goes high enough) leads a truly satisfactory and successful life.

Perhaps with today's growing interest in the psychological side of living there will come greater recognition to the man, rich or poor, mechanic or biochemist, professor or tycoon, who becomes master of his emotions and his talents and leads a well-adjusted, socially useful life. Thus could the American dream become democratized.

"Bit Of Home"

The writer has read with deep interest the article on the "U. S. Housing Scheme," by Conrad P. Harness, in your issue of January 9. It is strange that there is no champion for the transferred Government worker in the lower brackets—a worker who desires a life as nearly comparable to the one she left at home. A small apartment is all that is necessary—no "share baths," "share kitchens" but a compact simple affair with basic furniture and utilities, clean and a reasonable rent.

The residential hotels, admirable as they are for the purpose, do not fully satisfy the older person who wishes for her "bit of home."

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

ERP And Permanent Crisis

THE INTERIM Report from Europe on the prospects of the Marshall Plan will not be easy to reconcile with the theory, held by many but not all who are in high places,—that the balance of forces between the Soviets and the West is progressively improving, and that it is advantageous to postpone the negotiation of partial settlements.

Lippmann

The Economist in London, which speaks with great authority, says that "the Marshall Plan, in the rather simple form originally conceived, cannot succeed within the time originally set . . . There is no means by which the Marshall countries can, even with the present scale of American aid, prevent a serious fall in their standards of living in 1952 . . . If the time were longer—15 or 20 years—they could do more; but as a four-year proposition, the task is beyond their joint resources."

THIS CONCLUSION rests on official estimates which are in themselves admittedly extremely optimistic about European prospects—as for example, that the European output per man hour can, despite the scarcity of capital, be increased by 15 per cent in the four years; that European exports can capture half of the American market in South America; and that the American export industry "will reconcile itself to the permanent loss of its European markets" and "permit discrimination against itself."

THESE DISCLOSURES, arising out of the experience of the first year of ERP will, says The Economist be "greeted with indignation as well as regret." Not necessarily with indignation. Not if the truth is candidly presented to the Eighty-first Congress. American public opinion is sufficiently matured and educated not to give way to a paroxysm of despair because a great experiment, necessarily one of trial and error, is showing that new decisions are needed.

For practical experience of the Marshall Plan has shown that while American aid to Europe is not going to produce the results hoped for when it was adopted, its real function has been to provide the stricken nations with time to face their problems. Had the countries been compelled to adjust suddenly and immediately their standards of life to their actual earning power, the strain on their governments and their institutions would have been intolerable. Whether the strain would have resulted in communism, fascism, or anarchy is debatable; it is certain that the essential freedoms and decencies of their lives would have been impaired.

For that reason the American people, and this Congress, will not cut off Marshall aid even when they realize that the great objectives—European economic independence and unity—are not within sight of being reached.

BUT WHAT they will have to consider deeply is whether the time which is bought by the American subsidy is being wisely used. This is a very complicated question which cannot be answered readily or simply. If we look at it solely from the point of view of what the various European countries are doing, we might conclude broadly that the United Kingdom is at one end of the scale, Greece at the other, and the rest at various points in between.

The United Kingdom is a shining example of a country which is using the time gained by the subsidy for a prodigious, almost ruthless, effort to adjust itself to the fact that it is much poorer than it was, and must learn to live accordingly. The British may not succeed in making themselves independent of American subsidies by 1952. But if they do not wholly succeed, it will not be because they are not trying.

There is no evidence in Britain of the disposition to use the time gained to postpone, rather than to deal with, the grave problems of postwar readjustment.

WHAT WE did not see clearly last year, but can see much more clearly now, is that these great readjustments within most of the European countries cannot be averted by the Marshall Plan. Nor can they be postponed indefinitely. It is here that the cold war, in its present phase, enters into the problem. There is no immediate danger, provided we maintain a firm policy backed by our rearmament, of a Soviet military conquest of Europe. Nor is there any present danger of a Communist seizure of power in western Europe, especially if we enable France and Italy to augment the forces required to maintain order at home.

THE REAL problem is how to provide the European continent with the confidence to dare to deal with its internal postwar readjustment. That confidence will never, I think can never, exist, as long as the Russian army is in the heart of Europe. It will not exist after the North Atlantic Pact is signed. It will not exist after we have adopted military lend lease. It will not exist if we have 70 instead of 50 air groups. It can begin to exist only as and when the Russian army begins to recede, begins to return to the frontiers of the Soviet Union.

THEN, and then only, will the people of continental Europe really begin to believe that they can dare open up the internal questions that are now suppressed, and festering under the surface. A responsible French statesman complained to me that we were asking too much of him, that he should suppress the Communist strike in the coal fields and then also lay new taxes on the peasants and the business men. For while many European countries can deal with insurrection by fifth columns, they cannot feel secure enough to face their domestic problems as long as 35 or 40 motorized divisions of the Red army are on the Elbe within striking distance to intervene in civil disorders.

That is why, in the view of many who are entitled to judge these things, it is so desirable to seek out even partial compromise settlements — particularly for Berlin and for Austria —which will relax the tension. I know that it can be argued that if the tension is relaxed, the effort to deal with all these great issues will also be relaxed. But it is, I believe, an unwarranted defeatism to think that the Europeans will not try to recover or that Americans will default on their responsibilities in Europe unless the conflict with the Soviet Union remains in a condition of permanent crisis.

Forrestal's Job

MORE THAN any other figure in the Truman Administration, Secretary of Defense James Forrestal has been the target of criticism and attack since the November election. Punch after punch has been aimed at the man who has the tough, taut look of a veteran prizefighter.

Childs

In most of these attacks he is represented as the spokesman of big business—until his resignation in 1940 he was president of the powerful financial firm of Dillon, Read & Co.—who is seeking to restore private ownership and the old cartel system in Germany's Ruhr. He is also accused of being imperialistic and anti-Zionist because of his public insistence that oil from the Middle East is essential to American security and the success of the Marshall Plan.

From this the attack has been carried one step further to link him with Secretary of State Marshall and Undersecretary Robert Lovett, both to retire in a week, as sponsors of an anti-Russian foreign policy. He has been called a warmonger and his resignation has been predicted and freely anticipated by his attackers.

During this period Forrestal had said nothing. Because it seemed to me important to try to get some idea of his views, I submitted questions to him related to the attacks. Now that it is clear that he will remain in the Cabinet indefinitely, which means at least a year, his answers have an even greater interest. The questions and the answers by Forrestal follow.

QUESTION: Do you have any interest in Dillon, Read & Co. that has continued down to the present? If so, what is the nature of that interest? If you were to retire, would you expect to go back to Dillon, Read?

Answer: I do not have, and have not had since 1940, any interest in Dillon, Read & Co. I have made no plans for my activity when I retire from Government service.

Question: In your opinion would Dillon, Read benefit if industry in the Ruhr were restored to private owners from the past?

Answer: I have no knowledge of the activities or interests of that firm at the present time, but I see no likelihood of any American investment participation in the industry of the Ruhr.

Question: Are you in favor of restoring industry in the Ruhr to the German corporations that held ownership prior to 1940?

Answer: This question has not come before me and I have no opinion.

Question: In your opinion is it possible to restore capitalism of the American free enterprise type in western Europe and specifically in western Germany?

Answer: I find it impossible to predict the form of business enterprise which will prevail in western Europe and in western Germany.

Question: Do you believe that war with communism, as represented in the Soviet Union and the satellite countries, is almost certain to come, within, say, a decade?

Answer: No one in a free democracy can ever accept war as inevitable. Any concept of war initiated by the United States is unthinkable.

QUESTION: What, in your opinion, are the prospects for peace in the next two or three years?

Answer: If we can maintain a reasonable degree of military strength and conduct ourselves with calmness and reason, I think peace can be maintained.

Question: What is your role in helping to shape American foreign policy?

Answer: American foreign policy is shaped by the President. The Department of State acts as his agent in the expression of that policy. The national military establishment takes part only to the extent of its statutory responsibilities as a participant in the National Security Council, which is charged with the duty of advising the President with respect to the integration of domestic, foreign and military policies so as to enable the military services and the other departments and agencies of Government to cooperate more effectively in matters involving national security.

Question: What is your explanation for the attacks directed against you in recent weeks?

Answer: I do not have reliable information which would enable me to answer this question.

Other men want Forrestal's job. That may be a source of the attacks. But even if the rivals now subside, he will remain, as will be shown in a following column, a controversial figure.

Chance for Refutal

The Georgia Senator said it was only fair to give Acheson a chance to answer "rumors and charges" about his attitude toward Russia.

One opponent of Acheson who probably will not testify is Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.). Wherry said yesterday he had not changed his views, but would do nothing until the Foreign Relations Committee had acted.

This suggested that Wherry preferred to denounce Acheson on the Senate floor rather than question him to his face in the committee hearings.

County Bill To Ask Elected School Board

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 12 (Spl.).—A Montgomery County referendum this year calling for an elected school board is provided for in a bill to be introduced in the Maryland General Assembly Friday by the county's delegation.

The bill provides for nonpartisan election of board members, rather than the present system of appointment by the Governor—if county residents approve the change in the referendum.

Under the bill, the board would be made up of seven members, who would serve staggered terms.

Four members would be elected in November, 1950, general elections and the full board in 1954. Present appointed members would continue to serve until replaced by the elected members.

The proposed measure was sponsored by the Montgomery County Council of Parent-Teachers Associations and later was indorsed by the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Under the proposed bill, the Montgomery County Board of election Supervisors is directed to provide a special election November 8, 1949, on the question.

If the voters accept the new plan, appointed members whose terms would expire prior to that date, would serve until January 1, 1955, at which time an entire new board of seven will take office.

Nominations would be nonpartisan and by petition of 500 voters. No designation of party affiliation will be placed on the ballot and the persons receiving the highest votes would be elected.

The elected board members would serve without salaries, but such sum as is provided by the county council may be paid them for reimbursement for travel and other expenses.

It is expected that the bill will encounter stiff opposition in both houses and from the Governor, whose appointive prerogatives are limited by the bill.

The General Assembly, meanwhile, started thinking about 24 new bills today.

The bills introduced from the floor at brief afternoon sessions included one to let juries decide whether convicted rapists must be hanged.

Delegates William S. James (D., Harford) and J. Gifford Scarborough (D., Cecil) drew up the measure. They proposed that juries be permitted to add "without capital punishment" to guilty verdicts, thus limiting the court to a 20-year sentence.

Delegate Jerome Robinson (D., Baltimore Fourth) sent in a bill to permit a constitutional convention if a majority of votes on the question favor one.

As it is now, referenda must be held every 20 years on whether the constitution needs revising. But a majority of the number who vote for Governor in the same election must approve a convention.

Bill Extends Rent Control 27 Months

By The Associated Press

Legislation to extend rent ceilings 27 months, and put thousands of dwellings back under rent control will be introduced by Senator Myers (D., Pa.), probably today.

Senator Maybank (D., S. C.), chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, told a reporter the measure might become the Administration's rent bill. Mr. Truman has asked for tightening of controls and extension for at least two years.

First Meeting Friday

The Senate Banking Committee will hold its first meeting of the session Friday. Maybank predicted that rent legislation will get top priority. The present law expires March 31. Myers' bill would extend control through June, 1951.

Under Myers' measure, rent control would revert pretty much to its status prior to changes authorized, over Mr. Truman's protest, by the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress.

New dwellings, including those rented since they were de-controlled, would be placed under rent ceilings again. So would converted dwellings and permanent hotel accomodations, including apartment hotels.

A rent control official said recontrol of new construction alone would apply to thousands of dwelling units.

Rent Rollbacks?

An aide to Myers said that in bringing new dwellings back under control, there might be a rollback of rents in some cases.

The Housing Expediter's office would have authority to fix the ceiling for such units. If the no-control rent were higher than for comparable dwellings in the area, the expediter could order a rent cut in setting the ceiling.

Trasient hotel rooms and motor courts would remain decontrolled.

The bill would give the housing expediter authority to control or recontrol whole additional areas.

The measure also would ban any more 15 per cent increase leases, under those, first authorized in 1947 and continued under the present law, landlords can raise rents 15 per cent where the tenant agrees in exchange for a lease barring further increases for a specified period.

Capitol Awaits Administration Farm Program

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan will be asked soon to tell the Senate Agriculture Committee what the Administration favors in the way of (1) grain storage, and (2) farm price supports.

At the organizing meeting of the committee yesterday, Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), said that a country-wide system of grain storage facilities and warehouses for other surplus crops would be given priority by his committee over a price support program. More storage facilities will be needed in a few months when harvesting of the early crops starts, Thomas said, while changes in the price support law will not become necessary until next January.

The question of whether the price support policy should call for rigid supports as at present, or a sliding scale, such as will go into effect next January, has split members of the Senate Committee. The sliding scale would support prices at from 60 to 90 per cent of parity according to supplies of the commodities supported.

The nation's big farm organizations are similarly divided on the same question.

Pay Boost Is Blocked

at the beginning of the Administration."

He predicted that if the proposed cuts were made in the bill, there would be "interminable delays" in getting legislation increasing the salaries of Cabinet officers and the 200 other top officials.

He said there was no question that the President wants the bill approved in the form recommended by the committee.

"I think the President may step in and try to get the bill through the House as it is," said Flanders.

"The bill was proposed when we expected to have a Republican President, but the same plinciples apply—whoever is President. Former President Herbert Hoover puts this bill as the first necessary step for Government economy."

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), chairman of the Senate Civil Service Committee, said he was prepared to join in the plan for limiting the bill to President, Vice President and Speaker. He added that this list might also include the Speaker Pro-Tem of the Senate.

Even if the other sections of the bill are dropped for the presnt, Johnston said "you can rest assured that they will not be dead."

Johnson left no doubt that if the bill is trimmed in line with the plan described by Lucas, the District pay raise section would go out. This section calls for giving classified District employes the $330 pay raise that other Federal classified workers got in July, and the District raise would be retroactive.

Firemen, policemen and teachers, would not be included even if the classified pay raise for District employes went through—those groups are covered by separate pay acts.

Johnson said he was for increasing the pay of the District employes, but that it could come later.

The rush to meet the inauguration deadline for the presidential pay increase stems from the Constitution.

It says: "The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services, a compensation, which shall neither be encreased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them."

Airline Plane Propeller Kills Woman Passenger

Inglewood, Calif., Jan. 12 (U.P.).—A woman passenger was killed today by a whirring propeller on an American Airlines DC-6 she tried to board at Los Angeles Airport.

A ticket book identified her as Miss H. Crawford, and her itinerary called for a flight to Dallas and then to New Orleans.

In her purse was $2044 in small bills. She carried two safe-deposit box keys from the First Bank & Trust Co., South Bend, Ind. A paper bag contained stockings and shoes, but no other baggage was found.

Airline authorities said she dashed through a gate marked "Employes Only" and came out on the wrong side of the plane, which was already signaled to start.

Postal Inspector Slain in Postoffice

Oklahoma City, Jan. 12 (AP).—A postal inspector was shot to death in the postoffice today by a 69-year-old man who said he fired "in self defense and in defense of civil rights."

E. M. Harkins, 51, was struck in the back of the head by a pistol bullet as he bent over to take mail from his postoffice box.

Joseph Donnelly surrendered and pleaded innocent but made his self-defense statement.

Today's shooting followed yesterday's slaying of Earl Pruet, prominent Oklahoma City attorney, by an unknown assaliant. The slayer walked into Pruet's office in a skyscraper here and shot him four times.

The killer escaped down the elevator. Identification was sketchy although it was agreed he was elderly.

Donnelly told officers that several years ago "the mails lost two $20 money orders for me, and when I asked for help, Harkins and three other postoffice officials accused me of lying and cheating them. They even put it down on my record and I couldn't get a job with the Government during the war.

Mrs. Truman Not In Hospital, but Welcomes Idea

Mrs. Harry Truman is in a hospital, but it developed that this Mrs. Truman is not the President's wife.

A rumor that the First Lady was a patient in the University of Iowa Hospital spread here today. A reporter phoned Blair House, temporary home of the President and his family. Mrs. Reathal Odum, Mrs. Truman's secretary, said there was nothing to it.

Then Mrs. Truman herself cut in:

"Definitely I'm not in a hospital. There are lots of us who may wish we were until after the rush of January 20 is over," she said.

January 20 is Inauguration Day.

Man Robbed 3 Times Before He Goes Home

Printers know Baskerville as a type face design.

Police know Baskerville as a type—a type of victim that looks good to the city's yoke artists.

Richard Baskerville, 43, of 24 Myrtle st. ne., was robbed three times early yesterday at two-hour intervals beginning at 2 a. m.

A waiter, Baskerville was happily clutching a $10 bill in his hand at 2 a. m. in the 1200 block of 7th st. nw. A lone thief grabbed the bill and ran off.

Baskerville walked to the Second Precinct station, reported the robbery and then said he was going back to the scene to search for the thief.

Two hours later, Baskerville was back in the station house to report that at 4 a. m. two men had yoked him and taken his brown hat in the rear of the 1200 block of 7th st. nw.

Police gave him a substitute hat and advised him to go to his home. He didn't.

At 6 a. m., robbery squad detectives chased three men who were robbing a man in the 1400 block of 7th st. nw. The men got away.

The victim was, naturally, Baskerville. This time he had been robbed of the second hat, his trench coat and his shoes. The shoes were recovered along the route taken by the fleeing men.

The police teletype message which reoprted Baskerville's adventures closed with this note: 'Mr. Baskerville is now going to his home."

Pastor Lays Misconduct Suit to Spite

Glendale, Calif., Jan. 12 (AP).—A Baptist minister, father of four children, today blamed "disgruntled" parishioners for charges he had affairs with 40 feminine members of his church.

Dr. Brougher

Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, jr., 46, pastor of Glendale First Baptist Church for 21 years, labeled as "entirely false" charges in a court suit filed yesterday.

Mrs. Sadie Williams and Fletcher Edgar Maxwell said they were suing for members of the church. They alleged that Dr. Brougher "has even recently been known to chase a lone young woman in an automobile in an attempt to force her to the curb on a dark street, and has been known to associate with bookies."

Mrs. Williams and Maxwell said they sought to bring before the church evidence of "fantastic conduct" and "incredible peccadillos" of the pastor, but that Dr. Brougher removed deacons who wanted to present the charges.

[The dictionary lists a peccadillo as a light or trifling sin.]

The suit also contends that Dr. Brougher "boasted" of his associations with 40 women church members.

It alleged further that:

"In condemnation and rejection of church views and Christianity, J. Whitcomb Brougher, jr., has debauched many of the women members of his congregation.

"He has caused disruption in the marital relations of numerous families.

"He has promiscuously osculated (kissed) young girls who are members of the congregation.

"He has openly boasted of having meretricious (vulgar) relations with over 40 women.

"He has been known to maintain a mistress and otherwise disport himself in a most reprehensible manner.

The minister said the action "is only a repetition of accusations brought four years ago by a small disgruntled group of members and former members of the church."

"The matter," he added, "was completely and thoroughly reviewed by a committee, the board of deacons and the entire congregation, all of whom found the accusations entirely false and without foundation."

Dr. Brougher's father is Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, sr., former president of the Northern Baptist Convention.

Maj. Hoffman Gets Probation

Major Franklin Hoffman, 4708 15th st. nw., was given five years probation yesterday in District Court for cruelty in the beating of his 10-year-old son.

Major Hoffman, a Medical Administration officer, pleaded guilty to the charge. A companion accusation of assault with a dangerous weapon will be dismissed, it was said.

The charge arose last July, when police were called to the Hoffman home, 217 Gallatin st. nw., in response to a complaint that a child was screaming in the basement.

There, it was reported, they found the boy, Rene Augustine "Andre" Hoffman. Police said the parents were away from home; that the boy had been beaten with an electric light cord until his buttocks and back were welted. He was tied with rope and his mouth and eyes had been bound with tape, it was reported.

Andre had run away from home a few days before, it was said.

The sentence was imposed by Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut, who also suspended a year's jail term.

Two Men Held in Hyattsville On Waitress' Charge of Rape

Two District men were held without bond yesterday at Hyattsville Police Station after a 34-year-old married waitress charged they had raped her early yesterday in an auto on a side road in Cheverly Manor subdivision.

The men, scheduled for hearing Monday at Hyattsville Police Court, are William W. Brown, 24, of 1647 Fort Dupont st. se., and Hunter F. Swan, 19, 2423 N. Capitol st. Both were listed by police as machinists.

According to police, the woman, also a District resident, was found by a passing motorist on Landover rd. near Cheverly early yesterday and taken to the station, where she said she had been beaten and raped.

Police went to the place, where they found the men asleep in a car, they said, and arrested them.

The woman, after examination by Dr. John T. Maloney, deputy county medical examiner, swore out warrants against the men.

Dr. Maloney said his examination disclosed no apparent bruises, but added that the waitress complained of aches and pains. She was taken to Prince Georges County General Hospital.

Base Commander Flies Serum to Aid Lieutenant's Wife

The commanding officer of Mitchel Air Force Base in New York personally flew a special serum from Washington to New York yesterday to save the life of the wife of one of his officers.

Col. Thomas Musgrave, 35, in Washington on official business, heard of the emergency request his base hospital had made to Walter Reed Hospital for large quantities of the serum and volteered to fly it himself.

The serum was finally located in Bethesda Naval Hospital, rushed to Bolling Air Force Base by ambulance, and flown by Musgrave in a B-25 to New York in only 50 minutes.

Critically ill in New York was Mrs. Elizabeth Bailey, wife of Lieut. Wilbur Bailey, who is on temporary duty at school in Washington.

Wife Sues for Custody, Support of Children

Mrs. Rosalie East Wilson, 815 Tuckerman st. nw., filed suit yesterday in District Court for custody and maintenance of her two children.

She charged that her husband, Herbert Lee Wilson, radio executive with offices at 1025 Connecticut ave. nw., deserted her six months before she bore her second child and has refused to support them. The Wilsons were married in 1937, the suit states. She said Wilson makes $90,000 a year.

4-Day Snow in California

(From Press Dispatches)

For once in history, California Chambers of Commerce were hoping for rain.

Warmer with showers was the forecast for today. Yesterday was the fourth straight day it snowed in California, and last night the area again had below-freezing temperatures.

Citrus growers continued to fire smudge pots to ward off the frost that has not only damaged fruit crops but depleted stocks of long underwear and tire chains, both rarities in the California section.

Washington had its snowfall, too—1.7 inches by Weather Bureau measurement—but the snow melted rapidly. Generally fair weather was forecast here today, with the temperature ranging from 33 to 46.

In other areas, the weather kept up its antics Wednesday.

Weary power line crews struggled last night to restore ice-broken circuits to scores of blacked-out cities and towns in southeastern Kansas and Southwestern Missouri.

Three days of sleet and freezing rain, the worst such storm in 13 years, left power circuits a mass of twisted wires and broken poles.

Larger towns affected were Parsons and Coffeyville, Kans., with 17,000 residents each; Independence, with 12,000 and Chanute, with 11,000.

In southwestern Missouri, partial service was restored yesterday at Joplin and Carthage, both without any but minimum power since Monday night. No major operations had been performed at Joplin, a city of 45,000, since Monday.

Gordon, Nebr., town of 2100, isolated for 10 days by snowdrifts, was now getting food and fuel.

The Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. put 1600 men to repairing 42,000 wire breaks and restoring long distance service to 197 towns and cities. Five thousand poles were down, 2413 circuits in trouble. Damage to lines and equipment was estimated at $1,825,000.

Restoration of power to the water works at Coffeyville ended a water crisis in the city. At Pilot Grove, in central Missouri, water rationing was instituted.

The kind of weather that comes in mid-May ranged from the Carolinas to New Orleans. Maximum temperatures were in the high 70s or low 80s. Several cities listed record heat for the date.

One on the Aisle—

Mighty O'Neill Overloads Film

By Richard L. Coe

INEVITABLY, a film version of "Mourning Becomes Electra" running just under two hours resembles a Reader's Digest condensation. Every scene is a highlight, a juicy chunk of drama, one of which would serve as the climax of an ordinary film.

More than this, the National's film version of Eugene O'Neill's great six-hour drama presents larger-than-life figures virtually never seen on the screen. In people and subject matter, our leading playwright is dealing with unfamiliar terms in an approach so searching and unrelenting as to startle the customary film audience.

Add to this the fact that the screen, as a medium, automatically enlarges every action, every emotion and you have some of the problems facing the brave man, Dudley Nichols, who has adapted and directed this courageous screen effort.

For, although beset with such cinematic problems, "Mourning Becomes Electra" aims far higher than the usual film. That it does not succeed, that on occasion it evokes nervous titters from its unrelieved drama, is no one's fault in particular. It boils down to a question, one suspects, of the medium and the massive structure of human relationships O'Neill had in mind.

O'Neill's trilogy, to remind you, was inspired by the classical Greek drama of Aeschylus, "Oresteia." The tragic story of Agamemnon, Clytemnestra and their children, Electra and Orestes, inspired the American playwright to set his story in New England at the close of the Civil War. It was first produced in New York 17 years ago, with Nazimova and Alice Brady in the leading roles and, working with the playwright, Nichols has stuck closely to the three-part drama.

"MOURNING BECOMES ELECTRA." RKO release produced, in association with the Theater Guild, and directed by Dudley Nichols. Photographed by George Barnes. Music by Richard Hageman. At the National.

The Story

Gen. Ezra Mannon is about to come back from the war. His daughter, Lavinia, has discovered that her mother, whom she always hated, has been having an affair with a sea captain with whom she herself is in love. Quelling this passion, she discovers that this man, Adam Brandt, is the illegitimate son of her father's brother, a man whose name is never mentioned by the Mannons.

All this she throws up to her mother, Christine, shortly before her father arrives. Ezra is hopeful that the 25-year marriage, which began badly, may yet yield happiness to him and Christine, but she passionately assures him she will hate him forever and reveals that she is in love with his illegitimate nephew. At this his weak heart fails him and, to make sure that he dies, Christine poisons him.

When the son, Orin, returns, he appears to be the man his mother never permitted him to be, but he soon vacillates between her selfishness and his sister's demand for revenge. Lavinia insists that they spy upon their mother and her lover. Enraged that any man should take his mother from him, Orin kills Adam. Ultimately, both mother and son kill themselves, and Lavina, left by her startled girlhood lover, locks herself in the fated Mannon mansion, there to be haunted by Mannon ghosts until she dies.

Rosalind Russell Stars

As you can see, this is no ordinary movie material! incest, oedipus complexus, uxorcide, suicide are not the passions one finds on the screen. And with one ghastly tragedy piled on another, in the brief space of less than two hours, the impact is at once tremendous, wearing and unlikely. Originally the film ran about three hours, but since its New York opening of over a year ago, it has been ruthlessly edited down. Exactly what the original film was like, I do not know; certainly the brooding, incisive figures must then have been just as stark in the enlarged medium of celluloid as they are now.

The acting is forceful without being necessarily persuasive. Again, I do not think this more the fault of the players than their situation. Katina Paxinou, as the wife, for instance, has a scene which requires her to moan her wretched emotions on learning of the death of her lover. I found this a rending scene; it is a scene which on the stage is more customary than on the screen. Such raw emotion, magnified by the camera, is ruthless indeed. So, too, are Michael Redgrave's miseries as Orin.

Rosalind Russell, as the sister who substitutes brother-love for father-love, has a devastating problem for a screen actress and it's not altogether her insufficiency that makes one conscious that you watch Miss Russell acting, not Lavinia living.

For all that, "Mourning Becomes Electra" is a distinguished screen effort, an absorbing, frightening view of souls in torment.

THE MOST AMUSING satire to come this way in the National's unnatural stageless season is on view at the Shoreham's Blue Room . . . Here, twice nightly, Les Compagnons de la Chanson are doing with nine skilled voices what only the Companions of Song can do . . . They're delightfully funny folk, these men, but they also are a musical joy . . . Their humor crops out in a riotous version of opera or in spoofing the Don Cossack Chorus as if the Russians were singing "Au Clair de la Lune." . . . Their musical charm lies in such songs as "Les Yeux de ma Mere," a number you should insist on hearing at encore time. . . . It is a satire quite unlike the bald eccentricities of Spike Jones, though when they've a mind to, Les Compagnons can raise the vocal roof . . . It is a wit at once sharp and tender, and during this week and next you couldn't do better than Blue Room it for laughs . . . If vous neparler Francais, it doesn't matter one whit.

STARK NEWS FOR CHRISTINE—Rosalind Russell and Michael Redgrave have just told their mother, Katina Paxinou, that they have killed her lover. The scene is from Dudley Nichols' film version of Eugene O'Neill's drama, "Mourning Becomes Electra," about the tragic Mannons, Lavinia, Orin and Christine, now at the National

'Untamed Breed,' Rugged Tale Of Old West, Opens at Met

By Orval Hopkins

YOU got these three brothers out in the West someplace, see. The youngest cuts up a little, so the middle one starts to teach him a lesson. Whereupon the eldest allows that since he's the eldest he can do all the disciplining, and he starts to slug the second son. Second son ducks and eldest socks youngest. It's a scream.

Then you got Gabby Hayes going to bed with his hat on. He complains he can't sleep and a faithful peon coos, "You got your hat on a leetle." Gabby nods, starts to return to the pillow, and then gives himself a great big double take. It's a scream.

The movie is "Untamed Breed." It opened at the Metropolitan yesterday to the noisy enjoyment of a good sized crowd. "Untamed Breed" is, of course, one of those squinting titles. It refers to the square-jawed hero as well as to a wild horse and an every-bit-as-wild Brahma bull, all of whom, or which, are involved in this stirring tale of the old West.

I guess it's the old West. Nothing essential happens that couldn't happen today, although the people in the film wear fancier clothes and ride statelier horses than the working cowhands I've seen. At any rate, the story goes something like this:

Sonny Tufts blows into town and people start derisively calling him a Texas Wrangler. This is confusing right at the start, because an educated friend of mine says that if they call you a Wrangler at Oxford you're one of the top hands. It doesn't really matter, though, come to think of it.

So presently the Brahma bull gets loose and starts raising merry Ned with the farmers, the farmers' wives, the crops, the corrals and the corn cribs. Nobody can catch him. He's a tough bull, and quick, too. Word gets around that Tufts turned him loose, for a reason never made clear. Tufts vows to get him back, and does so, despite the evil designs of the three brothers herein mentioned. They're the villains, it turns out. There is also a girl, Barbara Britton, whom Tufts marries and wins, in that order, and quite a bit of other livestock, both two- and four-legged, all of it making a lot more noise than seems necessary.

As near as I can gather from the somewhat meager documents at hand here, Tufts is a New England boy—Yale, I understand—and his pronunciation of words like past, fast, last, curtains and skirt has a singular incongruity coming from the lips of a lovable ol' cowpoke down Texas way. Tufts is a great one to smile the shy, boyish smile and I know he'll charm you. Miss Britton—well, she's just another poor girl caught in a Western movie. Gabby Hayes has a beard second only to that of Monty Woolley and I can't think of any other reason to mention him in the same sentence with Woolley. Hayes is in this for comic relief. He ain't funny.

There's a Leon Erroll comedy, too, at the Met, and I didn't think they were still making those things. Also there's a short about skiing and skating at Middlebury College in Vermont (it looks most attractive).

"THE UNTAMED BREED." Columbia release in Cinecolor produced by Harry Joe Brown. Screen play by Eli Colter from his Saturday Evening Post story. Directed by Charles Lamont. At the Metropolitan.

Lawyers Try to Block Hearing Friday in Patterson Will Case

A new legal snarl in the complex Patterson will litigation loomed yesterday as attorneys for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka sought to block a pretrial hearing set for Friday.

Harold A. Kertz, an attorney for the daughter of the late Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, who is attempting to break her mother's will, filed notice in District Court of intention to appeal orders issued in the case Monday by Judge Alexander Holtzoff.

Over the objections of Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys, Judge Holtzoff on Monday had ordered that pretrial arguments in the case should proceed Friday, and he appointed attorneys to protect the interests of three minors who would benefit from the will.

Kertz, at that time, argued unsuccessfully that the pretrial hearing was "premature," and that the time had not yet expired for all interested parties to indicate if they wish to participate in the suit which involves an estimated $18,500,000 estate.

Judge Holtzoff ruled that this time had expired, and indicated he would adhere to a previously ordered trial date of January 18.

The notice of appeal objects to setting the partial date for January 10, extending it to January 14, and to ordering the appointment of the attorneys or "guardians ad litem" for the minors, as all being "premature."

It seeks a special appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys indicated they would file the actual appeal today. This may prevent Friday's pretrial hearing, and could delay the proceedings for some time.

Mrs. Gizycka contends her mother's will, which leaves her $25,000 a year for life and certain property—but no share in the Washington Times-Herald which Mrs. Patterson owned and published—was executed through fraud and duress, and charges her mother was of "unsound mind."

Throughout the proceedings her attorneys have insisted they should be given "reasonable" time to prepare their case.

Taking Pictures

Whatever Happens to Those Snapshots Everybody Makes?

No elaborate props were necessary to get this touching picture of the young lad and his dog. A studio-type camera and two photoflood lamps was the camera gear necessary

By Ollie Atkins

WHAT happens to the millions of pictures photographers make which nobody ever sees, and why do they make so many exposures in the first place?

This question sticks in the mind of everyone who sees cameramen make picture after picture of apparently the same thing and certainly it worries public figures, who feel that any photographer worth his salt should be able to get a half decent picture in at least two shots.

It is possible to walk up to a situation and carefully shoot one negative and win the Graflex grand prize of the year. But the odds are against the photographer with just one negative, for any single error in the entire photographic process will discount his efforts. Each time you add another negative you increase your chances for a good photograph.

Among news photographers, the most common chances for error are due to closed eyes from flash bulbs or poop poses, as when the subjects are listening to instructions shouted from opposition photographers. The safest way to make a picture among opposition photographers is with the trusty flash bulb, but a second or third and even a fourth shot will allow the cameraman to make a daylight snapshot and very likely a much better effect with the natural light being the sole source of illumination.

Consider the studio photographer who makes at least six negatives under perfect studio conditions and with a friendly subject. Seldom are all six pictures really good. You can easily see that the varied conditions all photographers meet out-of-doors demands several attempts at each idea for a good picture.

Amateurs must consider this problem. Film and bulbs cost money and every effort should be made to conserve these materials. When making extra shots change your camera angle. Vary your exposure and make close-ups as well as full-length pictures.

I have made several pictures of about the same scene under favorable conditions and always one picture turns out best. No matter how many pictures anyone makes of anything—one is bound to be the best. Now I do not mean that a handful of negatives given the exact exposure and made from the identical spot will be different. We assume here that some slight change in position and exposure will always be effected.

The more pictures a photographer makes the more chances he will have to produce a "best" shot. This is the principal reason why news photographers are not content to let a single picture cover their assignments. It is also why serious amateur photographers make plenty of pictures—they want to get that "best" shot really good.

One of the things which the public can never understand and which makes photographers a necessary "evil" in the eyes of some people is that on some public events eager-beaver amateur photographers will crowd their way into the regular press photographers and fire away much to the distraction of everyone concerned.

But what happens to all these second-best pictures after they are developed? Just as you figured, they go into the file. Nobody wants to show his second-best photos. Only the cream of the crop gets into print or the salon class.

Rocket Camera Is Disclosed By Air Force

United States Air Force plans for a "winged camera" to pin-point photograph the earth from rocket heights were revealed here yesterday.

The airborne astral eye, its optics already developed at Boston University, theoretically can picture the earth from 50 miles up clearly enough to identify trucks moving on the highways, it was said.

What is now needed, USAF planners said, is the "wings"—the rocket or other vehicle to carry it up and bring it back safely.

All that was shown here yesterday was a clear plastic model of the proposed flying camera, showing how the huge, 240-inch focal-length camera fits the fuselage of the needed vehicle. Exhibitors for the Air Materiel Command, of Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, however, filled in the details.

The exhibit was part of a large display of aerial photograph equipment set up here at Hotel Shoreham for the opening yesterday of the fifteenth annual meeting of the American Society of Photogrammetry. More than 1000 members of organizations concerned with air plotting, map-making and allied fields are attending the three-day conference.

To show the possibilities of the "winged camera," Air Force exhibitors pointed out that present cameras for aerial photography at today's ceiling of about 40,000 feet have 100-inch focal lengths. And they explained, the greater this distance between lens and film, the more space can be telescoped to bring out details of the area in focus.

For even further emphasis, they pointed out that cameras used in the V-2 rocket and Aerobee pictures of the earth from 70 miles up had focal lengths of 6¾ inches.

Almas Temple

Shriners Pick Camalier as Potentate

Renah F. Camalier of 4240 Nebraska ave. nw. last night was elected illustrious potentate of Almas Temple at the annual meeting of Shriners at headquarters, 1315 K st. nw.

Camalier

Camalier, an attorney, succeeds Maj. Omer W. Clark, administrative officer of the Veterans Administration. The new potentate officially will be installed at the Shoreham Hotel January 21. Camalier was chief rabban during 1948.

A full slate of officers was named. They include as members of the divan, Julius B. Gay, chief rabban; William J. B. Orr, assistant rabban; William P. Jacobs jr., high priest and prophet; Wilfred E. Lawson, Oriental guide; L. Whiting Estes, treasurer, and Frederick Wilken, recorder.

Camalier appointed the following as members of his divan: Orville E. Megby, first ceremonial master; Walter W. Hubbard, second ceremonial master; Ernest W. Snoots, director; Col. Edwin S. Bettelheim jr., marshal; Arthur J. Thomas, captain of the guard; John M. Credille, outer guard; William F. Holmes, inner guard.

Representatives elected to the Imperial Council were Camalier, Gay, Robert P. Smith, Howard P. Foley, Frederick Wilken, ad vitam; and L. P. Steuart, ad vitam, emeritus and at large.

Estes was reelected to the board of trustees and Ralph M. Wolfe was named a new member.

Camalier was born in Washington and was graduated from the National University Law School in 1924. He holds membership in the Bar Association of the District of Columbia, the Federal Bar Association, and the American Bar Association.

In 1926 Camalier was appointed as an Assistant United States Attorney. In 1941 he was appointed attorney for the Senate District Committee, from which position he resigned in October 1942 to return to law practice under the firm name of Camalier, McDonald, McNeil and White.

McNayr Takes Montgomery Manager Job

Montgomery County Supervisor I. G. McNayr yesterday accepted appointment as acting county manager under the new Montgomery charter.

The top administrative post is expected to pay $10,000 at the outset. A maximum of $12,000 is allowed.

In announcing the temporary appointment, the seven-member council-elect said three members, Mrs. Ralph E. Himstead, P. G. Ligon and Lewis Meriam, had been named to draw up recommendations for permanent appointment of a manager.

Simultaneously, the new governing body which will take office next week said three other councilmen-elect, Thomas C. Kelley, J. Douglas Bradshaw and President Frederic P. Lee had been chosen to make recommendations on the appointment of a fulltime county attorney.

The two posts, county manager and county attorney, will be the major ones filled by the new county council. Other department heads will be appointed by the county manager.

McNayr said yesterday it had not been clarified whether his "temporary" appointment would give him authority to name new department heads and revamp the governmental setup as provided by the charter.

2 Senators Hit DP Act, Ask Change

Two United States Senators last night voiced demands that the Eighty-first Congress amend the Wiley-Revercomb Displaced Persons Act to remove, what they termed, discriminatory aspects.

The legislators, Senators H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) and Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.), spoke before the second session of a seminar on public questions sponsored by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. The seminar was held in the auditorium of the Jewish Community Center.

The program stressing the question "What should be done to expedite a just solution of the DP problem?" was recorded for broadcast Friday over WOL.

Smith indicted the present law on three counts: (1) It is unfair to the displaced persons, (2) it is unjust to member-nations of the International Relief Organization, and (3) it is unfair to the American taxpayer.

The Senator explained his charges by pointing out that the law excludes persons who entered DP camps after December, 1945. He asserted that thousands of Jews who fled persecution in Poland after 1945 were thus left stranded.

Smith said he favors raising the over-all figure to 400,000 DPs to be admitted over a four-year period. The present law permits entry of 200,000 over a two-year period.

Douglas echoed Smith's views, adding a blast at an IRO decision not to pay any costs of transporting Jews to Israel.

ROOTS OF DILEMMA: The troubles that now face this country stem mainly from five sources, the educational committee of the local chapter of the American Institute of Banking was told last night at a meeting in the Mayflower. John A. Retailers Seek Ways to Slice Costs, Prices

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Retailers in meeting the challenge of the new buyers' market today hammered away at a three-pronged program—cut costs, cut prices, maintain profits.

In numerous private and public conferences some 6000 retailers at the thirty-eighth annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association debated their plans.

This new phase of retail selling started when Christmas sales were below expectations, and January business picked up markedly when customers responded to special sales.

Maurice Spector, president of the Blum Store of Philadelphia, said "in the next three months I expect to see new price ranges established in the consumers' favor.

H. E. Glave of Thalhimer Bros. of Richmond, Va., gave 15 methods of cutting expenses, all tried in the past year. Some of them were using paper towels in ladies' rest rooms instead of linen, paper bags for wrapping small items, eliminating of special deliveries, closing elevators during slack periods, cutting down on the use of gift boxes.

Malcolm P. McNair, Harvard University economist, told retailers evidence is mounting that inflation has passed its peak. "The straws right now point to a somewhat lower rate of business activity in 1949 than in 1948, some moderate declines in employment, a somewhat lower price level, and a somewhat less favorable price performance."

Time, Inc., Reports Executive Changes

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Creation of two new executive vice presidents and other organizational changes were announced today by Roy E. Larsen, president of Time, Inc.

Howard Black was named executive vice president for publishing operations and Charles L. Stillman executive vice president for manufacturing and financial operations. Black has been vice president and sales director, Stillman vice president and treasurer.

Other appointments include C. D. Jackson as publisher of Fortune; William D. Geer, former Fortune publisher, as associate publisher of Life; Edgar Baker as head of the company's foreign publishing division, and P. I. Prentice as editor and publisher of the Architectural Forum.

Veteran Pilot Defends Skipper

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 12 (AP).—Capt. Edward H. Eaton used reasonable prudence in navigating the steamer District of Columbia before it was in a collision on the morning of October 31, a defense witness in a Coast Guard hearing said here today.

He was Capt. Wilkie Stell, veteran harbor pilot, member of the Virginia Pilot Association and expert on upper Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River conditions.

It was Captain Stell's contention that Eaton could have done little else than to run the Norfolk & Washington Line steamer through the quarantine anchorage—if he wanted to find the entrance buoy to the Elizabeth River Channel.

To skirt the anchorage, Stell explained, Eaton would have crossed a busy ship thoroughfare at right angles and then would have had to guess the lie of the Norfolk Channel buoy.

New York Cotton

United Air Lines Cuts Eastbound Freight Rate

Chicago, Jan. 12 (AP).—United Air Lines said today its new air-freight rates eastbound from California to the Midwest and East place nearly all commodities under specific tariffs averaging about 16 cents a ton-mile. This, said the firm, is 20 per cent below the present general commodity rate, and lower rates are effective for volume shipments. The new rates are designed, said the concern, "to attract additional eastbound air-freight and help correct the traditionally heavier flow existing from East to West."

New Chevrolet for '49
Tested and Proved...

ITS ECONOMY WAS PROVED HERE
ITS RIDING COMFORT WAS PROVED HERE
ITS DURABILITY WAS PROVED HERE
ITS RELIABILITY WAS PROVED HERE
ITS DEPENDABILITY WAS PROVED HERE
ITS SPEED WAS PROVED HERE
ITS STABILITY WAS PROVED HERE
ITS IMPROVED PERFORMANCE WAS MEASURED HERE
ITS DURABILITY WAS CHECKED HERE
ITS POWER WAS PROVED HERE
ITS VISIBILITY WAS PROVED HERE

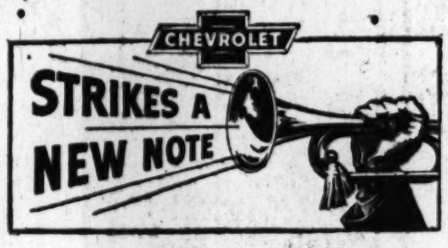
WHEN you see the 1949 Chevrolets, a glance will be enough to tell you they're new—all new. When you look inside, and under the hood, and beneath the chassis, you'll see that their newness is not merely in outward appearance, but in design and engineering and construction as well.

For these new automobiles are truly new, embodying the advances and improvements that, but for war and postwar years, would have been introduced from year to year.

Brand New . . . Yet already Proved in Action

But, to the engineers and technicians of the General Motors Proving Ground, the 1949 Chevrolet is already old. They know what it will do, and how exceedingly well it will do it—they know all about its performance, its comfort, its power, safety, durability and economy. It's an old model to these people, for already, they are testing and refining units projected for production models of years ahead.

Here, before a single new 1949 Chevrolet went into production, experimental models were tested—made to show that they possess, in greater measure than ever, all those qualities on which Chevrolet has built its leadership, qualities Chevrolet owners expect.



Worthiness Established in Test after Test

On long, level straightaways, these new Chevrolets passed exacting tests for acceleration, fuel economy, braking.

On the rugged road of imported Belgian blocks their durability was amply demonstrated.

And on the speed loop, running wide-open hour after hour . . . on the durability route, rough, tough and dusty . . . in every conceivable test . . . the 1949 models were made to prove that they have everything that owners have learned to expect from their Chevrolets.

It's Tried and True—Through and Through

In short, the General Motors Proving Ground tests are your assurance that your new-model Chevrolet has proved its worth through many months and many, many thousands of miles of rough handling. It's not only new, but tried—and true.

Doctors Note Gains By Tick Fever Drugs

"Brilliant" success in the use of aureomycin at Children's Hospital here against the oft-deadly tick fever was reported out last night to the District Medical Society.

It similarly has benefited one patient with brucellosis (undulant fever), but has been "disappointing" in inconclusive testings against two cases of miliary tuberculosis and one case of rheumatoid arthritis, the report stated.

Test trials of the new antibiotic on three typhoid cases were also inconclusive, according to the joint report of Drs. Frederic G. Burke and Sydney Ross, of the Children's staff.

Last night's report, presented at the monthly meeting of the District physicians, was the first to be made public on full clinical findings on the drug's test at the hospital. Preliminary reports, and scattered reports of tests at other hospitals, have indicated that the drug is just what physicians have been looking for to fight tick fever.

Dr. Gerald H. McAteer, also of Children's Hospital, told of progress in treatment of intestinal blockages in infants, and Dr. John H. Lyons, Children's Hospital surgeon, spoke on hyper-thyrodism.

The Burke-Ross report of 13 cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever was compared with histories of 47 previous cases of the disease that were treated at the hospital. Aureomycin, the doctors reported, subdued the raging fever usually within 24 to 48 hours. In one instance where the patient did not receive the drug until eight days after the fever's onslaught, it took but 72 hours to bring his temperature down.

Between 1932-35, 30 cases of tick fever were diagnosed at Children's Hospital. With no specific therapy available, severe complications were frequent, and three of the patients died. Seventeen other cases were treated there in the summers of 1946-47 with para-aminobenzoic acid. No deaths occurred in this group, though complications were recorded in 17.6 per cent of the cases.

The clinical report noted that there was no toxicity to aureomycin, and that it was tolerated as well and was as effective when given by mouth instead of injections. On the basis of their findings, the physicians designated the drug "the specific agent of choice for the treatment of Rocky Mountain spotted fever."

Rocky Mountain spotted fever was first diagnosed about 60 years ago in Snake River Valley, Idaho, and Bitter Root Valley, Montana, and was believed confined to those areas. Since 1930, however, it has cropped up increasingly in Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

Caused by the bite of an infected wood tick, the disease incubates in the human body for from 3 to 14 days before a spotted rash appears on the ankles and wrists. High fever, 103 to 105 degrees, sets in and the rash spots the entire body. The fever runs more than three weeks, with death, when it occurs, coming after the second week.

Mortality rate of the disease is recorded as 15 per cent in the Montana area, and 18 per cent in the Eastern States. Without drug treatment, tick fever brings mental confusion, a tendency to bleed, and such complications as gangrenous effects to the fingers, toes and ear lobes.

Grateful Gift To Hospital Aids Patient

The half-century delayed gratitude of a Staunton, Va., man to Johns Hopkins University Hospital has balanced out the hospital debt of Mrs. Howard R. Sine, it was learned yesterday.

Mrs. Sine is the mother of 13-year-old Claude Sine of Mountain Falls, Va., "blue baby" whose special heart operation was postponed in December until surgeons perfect new techniques for his condition.

A relative of the family yesterday disclosed more recent developments, revealing how Mrs. Sine benefited by the posthumous gift of the Staunton man, kicked by a horse in 1898 and given free treatment in the Baltimore hospital.

Mrs. Sine, the family said, was examined for an abdominal complaint in December while at the hospital arranging for her son's prospective operation. Examining physicians recommended an operation, and she was hospitalized on December 8, four days after her son was told he was well enough to wait out his own surgery requirements.

On January 2, Mrs. Sine was released after paying $40 toward her hospital bill, which was nearly $300, the family reported. Tears filled her eyes, it was said, when hospital authorities told her to forget the rest of the bill; that it would be paid for out of the $500 gift of the Staunton man.

Johns Hopkins Hospital officials declined comment on the family's report, declaring that financial arrangements with patients are kept in strict confidence.

They did verify, however, that last October the hospital received a check from Mrs. Nellie F. Miller of Route 4, Staunton, as a gift from her late husband for his free hospital treatment in 1898.

Doctors See Cancer Film

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—A new motion picture to help doctors spot cancer early, and thereby slash the death rate, was given its first showing today before surgeons and newsmen.

The half-hour color film, "Cancer: The Problem of Early Diagnosis," is intended for doctors only. It was produced jointly by the American Cancer Society and National Cancer Institute of the United States Public Health Service.

It shows doctors how to detect first signs of cancer, and stresses that early treatment saves lives. Dr. Charles S. Cameron, medical and scientific director of the American Cancer Society, said: "The evidence shows that doctors are not quite so alert to the sposibility of cancer as they should be. At one hospital in New York, it was found that 27 per cent of the breast cancer patients had been given wrong advice by the first doctor they saw."

Thurmond to Continue States' Rights Battle

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 12 (AP).—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, unsuccessful States Rights Democratic candidate for President, promised tonight "to continue to fight for those principles of Government upon which I believe the future welfare and happiness of our people depend."

In a speech delivered before the eighty-eighth South Carolina General Assembly, Thurmond declared: "It is our solemn duty not only as South Carolinians but also as Americans to oppose any and every attempt to whittle away from the States the rights reserved to them under the Constitution."

Ex-GI's House Designed for Wheel Chair

Ground was broken yesterday on a $20,850 house in Chevy Chase Manor, which will be built completely around a wheel chair.

The wheelchair is the permanent home of a veteran paralyzed from the waist down. Medical authorities have asked that his name be withheld.

But the house is specially designed to give his wheel chair maximum mobility with minimum effort. It is the first such house to be constructed in the District under the law which gives paraplegics $10,000 to build their own homes.

To Utilize Ramps

Seven concrete ramps will replace the steps of an ordinary house, for steps could isolate a paraplegic in a burning building. The ramps will rise gradually from street to terrace, from terrace to door, and from house to garage.

All doors will be a foot wider than the normal two-feet-six-inches to permit free passage of the wheel chair without scraped knuckles and scarring woodwork.

The garage will extend five feet wider than usual to allow the veteran to wheel right up to his specially designed car with hand throttle and brakes.

There will be no doorsills which could stop a wheel chair in its tracks.

Specially Designed Tub

A recessed tub only one-foot off the floor with specially designed overhanging rails will allow the paraplegic to swing himself comparatively easily into his bath.

The bathroom sink is designed to permit the wheel chair to fit underneath. Bathroom mirrors are hung low, so the paralyzed veteran can shave as he sits in his wheelchair.

The house will be a six-room California ranch type, with only one floor, according to its builders, Camalier and Crosby of Chevy Chase Manor. Over-all dimension will be 34 feet by 50 feet, not including wings, on a lot 84 feet by 105 feet. There will be three bedrooms, two baths, flagstone terraces front and rear, and a garage.

Approved in Record Time

Approval of the project by the regional office of the Veterans Administration was consummated in record time two weeks ago. Four days after the paraplegic's brother first contacted the VA, the site had been chosen, plans and specifications had been submitted, approved and declared "medically feasible," the $10,000 grant had been processed, and the VA guaranty of $4000 on the additional $10,850 had been signed. Financing was arranged by the Perpetual Building and Loan Association.

Only one other paraplegic house has been constructed under the law passed by the Eightieth Congress. That was built in Richmond, Va., close to the VA paraplegic center in McGuire Hospital.

Elsewhere in the country communities have themselves financed paraplegic colonies for their own paralyzed veterans.

Teacher Illness Bill Advanced

The draft of a bill providing sick leave for District school teachers yesterday was sent by the District government to the Budget Bureau for approval.

The bill, drawn up by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West and approved by the Commissioners, calls for 10 days of sick or emergency leave a year cumulative to 60 days. Teachers already in the system would be granted one day of leave for each year of service up to 20 at the time the bill becomes law. Provision also is made for teachers to borrow 20 days of future leave in case of extended illness.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning told a group of teachers on Monday that provisions of the bill will take care of 85 per cent of the cases in which teachers were forced to take leave last year.

The school head said that if the bill is enacted by Congress he is opposed to continuing the present practice under which teachers may take up to 60 days of leave a year providing they pay the substitute. The American Federation of Teachers, Local 27, recently petitioned school officials to retain this special leave.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

HANK GOWDY, the old catcher, has found a haven with the Cleveland Indians like many another veteran baseball man who didn't know where his next job was coming from until he was visited with the bounty of Bill Veeck.

POVICH

Veeck has hired big Hank as a trouble-shooter, inventing the title of roving coach for Gowdy. He'll tour the Cleveland farm teams in the minors as something of a super-professor of baseball attemting to remedy the weaknesses he notes among the talent there.

Veeck is doing the nice thing for Gowdy, but it is not a charity case. He's availing himself of the talents of a man who sopped up a deal of baseball lore since breaking in with the famed Boston Braves of 1914, even as Veeck has been buying the brains of coaching specialists for several years.

His kid manager, Boudreau, Veeck surrounded with such experienced coaches as Burt Shotton and Bill McKechnie. Shotton's talents are well-enough established. The year after he quit the Indians he moved in as Brooklyn's manager following the suspension of Leo Durocher, and took the Dodgers to the pennant.

TO GET McKECHNIE, who had been a pennant-winning manager with Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, Veeck had to go higher than any club president ever did for a coach. He paid McKechnie $20,000 a year as one of Boudreau's aides when the average coaching salary was not more than $7500.

Veeck didn't stop there, either. He made it interesting enough in a salary way for Muddy Ruel, deposed manager of the Browns, to take a coaching job with the Indians. Ruel wanted back in baseball after a short retirement and had the job of handling the Cleveland pitchers. He must have done well. Cleveland's pitchers were far the best in the league.

Another of Veeck's ventures wasn't quite as successful. That's when he hired Rogers Hornsby, perhaps the finest of all right-handed hitters, to coach big Pat Seerey in the art of meeting the ball. He put Hornsby on the payroll but Seerey didn't respond. In fact, his hitting dropped so sadly he was traded to the White Sox last summer. But Veeck didn't give up the idea that his hitters could be helped. He had Tris Speaker on the payroll as a batting coach last spring.

GOWDY HAS BEEN a part of the baseball scene for 40 years since he left his boyhood home in Columbus to join up with Lancaster, Pa., in the Ohio State League in 1908. The Giants had him briefly in 1911 before shipping him to the Braves with no great sense of loss, only to see him blossom as one of the top catchers of the National League and prove the spark-plug of the despised Braves' four-straight wins over the Athletics in the 1914 World Series.

He was equally famous on another account, however. One day in 1917 when the Braves were at Cincinnati, Gowdy peeled off his catching equipment and announced he was done with baseball for a while—he was joining up with the Army, the first major league ball player to enlist. In France he attained the rank of sergeant, but he was not quite grateful to his Army superiors.

"I was the first ballplayer to join the Army and the last one to get out of it after the war," Gowdy complained. "Other fellows were getting discharges after serving only a few months but I never could wangle myself out. They kept me with the Army of Occupation for a year when I had a nice $9000 job waiting for me the day I could get back to the Braves. When I did get back, they named Gowdy Field after me at Fort Benning, Ga., but that didn't put a dime in my pocket."

IN JOINING THE Cleveland organization, Gowdy meets up again with the ballplayer he probably best remembers, but it is not of pleasant memory. He's on the same payroll with Muddy Ruel, and it was Ruel who had to do with establishing Gowdy as the goat of the 1924 Washington-Giants World Series.

Gowdy caught every game for the Giants in that series, with Ruel his opposite number on the Senators. Until the big break came, it was Ruel, not Gowdy, who was the goat of the series. The Giants and Senators were locked in a 3-3 tie in the twelfth inning of that decisive game after the late Walter Johnson had moved in in the ninth for a last try at winning a series game.

Ruel was at bat with one out and none on in the Washington twelfth. To that point he had made only one hit in the series. He popped up, a high foul over Gowdy's head. Poised to catch the ball, Gowdy did and then went down in a heap and fumbled!

Hank had stepped on his mask and lost his footing! Thus reprieved, Ruel whacked a double to left and thus was on second base when Earl McNeely made the famed pebble hit that drove in the winning run.

Indians Hire Gowdy as Aide

Cleveland, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Hank Gowdy, who was a coach for the New York Giants during the past two seasons, today was signed by the Cleveland Indians as a "roving coach" for their minor league farm system.

Gowdy, 59, who was the first major league baseball player to enlist in World War I and also served as a major in World War II, will go from club to club, lending a hand on personnel requirements and in the development of young players when needed.

A former star major league catcher with the Giants and the Boston Braves for almost two decades, Gowdy previously coached the Braves from 1928 to 1937 and the Cincinnati Red from 1938 to 1942.

Dunbar Beaten In Overtime, 48-44

Roxboro (N. C.) High basketers needed an overtime period to defeat Dunbar last night, 48-44, on the Banneker court. Center Jack Robinson brought his point total to 28 for the night by scoring a field goal and foul point in the extra session.

Middies, Win Fourth, 71-39

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Navy ran up its largest score of the season to defeat Dickinson's basketball team here today, 71-39.

The big gun on the attack as the Middies registered their fourth win in eight games was Willie Wilson, whose one-handed hook shots accounted for 18 points from the field. Vince Schafmeister was high for Dickinson with 15.

The Middie reserves took over after the intermission with Coach Ben Carnevale using only a sprinkling of regulars.

'Better Club Victorious' As T of C Hires Balogh

Balogh

Balogh's first job for the T of C will begin on January 19 when the club stages the Rusty Payne-Curtis Sheppard heavyweight match at Manhattan Center.

Tuxedo-clad Balogh is the best known fight announcer since the late Joe Humphreys. Harry has given to the world such deathless phrases as "Henry Armstrong, that former native of St. Louis"; "may the better participant emerge victorious"; and "let there be no prejudicism."

Once, when he thought he saw Jack Dempsey at ringside, Balogh asked the former champ to enter the ring for an introduction. When told Dempsey wasn't in the audience, but in a hospital undergoing an appendectomy, Balogh cried out:

"Let's applaud him a good ovation anyway."

Bullets Bury Caps Under 106-92 Score

Special to The Post

Baltimore, Jan. 12.—Baltimore's Bullets continued to be the lone scourge in the BAA for the league-leading Washington Caps, turning them back here tonight with a dazzling offensive display, 106-92.

A packed house of more than 4000 roared its appreciation of the highest score Baltimore ever registered. That it was made against the hated intercity rival made the rooters supremely happy.

Baltimore, first team this season to hand the Caps two league setbacks, oddly enough trailed early in the game. Washington grabbed a 19-10 lead before the Bullets started hitting.

At half time, the stunned visitors were behind, 58-41.

And, at the three-quarter mark, Baltimore held a handy 79-54 advantage. At this juncture, the Caps started making menacing moves, shaving the Bullets' lead to nine points at one time in the final session. This time Stan Stutz took up the slack and matched the Caps practically by himself.

Stutz wound up high scorer for Baltimore with 17, but he was crowded by Chick Reiser and Fred Lewis, who each had 15. Rest of the 106-point total was divided fairly evenly among four others.

Bob Feerick, banished on personals, was top man for the Caps with 17 points, 11 of them from the foul line. Freddie Scolari had 14; Johnny Norlander, 12.

Fitzsimmons Suspended, Leo Fined By Chandler

Cincinnati, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler hung fines on Leo Durocher, Freddie Fitzsimmons and the New York National League club today for violating the tampering rule and warned that more severe penalties will be inflicted if anyone does it again.

Durocher, manager of the Giants, and Fitzsimmons, last year a Boston Braves' coach, were fined $500 each for negotiating a 1949 contract while Freddie still was employed by the Beantown club. Fitzsimmons also was suspended from March 1 to April 1.

The New York club was fined $2000.

"Clubs and their personnel are warned that future violations of the tampering rule will be accompanied by more severe penalties than those imposed in this instance," Chandler said in his finding.

"Coach Fitzsimmons and Manager Durocher both professed ignorance of the tampering rule. Such ignorance is not excused now and will not be in the future."

Written Consent Necessary

The rules say a player or coach must have the written consent of his club before he may negotiate with another outfit.

Chandler said that "except for the fact that Frederick Fitzsimmons has had long and honorable service in baseball, the commissioner would deprive the New York club of his services for the 1949 season."

Furthermore, baseball's head man wants the Giants' management to certify that the fines of Durocher and Fitzsimmons are paid solely out of their own funds and that they are not reimbursed "now or hereafter."

It was the second time Chandler had slapped Durocher, but today's fine was a caress compared to the year's suspension given him in 1947 when he was manager of the Brooklyn team.

Leo was set lown on that occasion for making statements and being involved in incidents Chandler held to be "detrimental to baseball."

Brooks Won Flag

And as he lolled in California sunshine, or sat moodily in a box at ball games, Burt Shotton took the Brooks and led them to the pennant and an unsuccessful bid for the world's championship against the New York Yankees.

In holding that New York Nationals violated the tampering rule, Chandler said:

"Their officials were obligated to find out the exact status of Coach Fitzsimmons before talking with him and before commencing any negotiations with respect to his employment, present or future. Because of their failure to so satisfy themselves, they are hereby fined $2000.

"Manager Durocher, because he conducted the negotiations without determining Coach Fitzsimmons' status, is hereby fined $500.

"Coach Fitzzsimmons is hereby suspended from March 1, 1949, to April 1, 1949. He will not report to the New York club's training camp until April 2, 1949, and will not perform any service for the club until that date. He is, moreover, fined the sum of $500."

Embry Says Colts Expect 'To Get Together' With Skins

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The Baltimore-Washington situation, chief stumbling block in the path of peace between the National Football League and All-America Conference, may be cleared up before the annual meetings of the two leagues next week in Chicago.

This was learned yesterday when Jake Embry, president of the Baltimore Colts, told The Washton Post he expected "to get together" with the Washington Redskin management in the near future.

Embry would not say when or where the Redskin get-together would take place but he reiterated the Colts' stand.

"We will operate a football team next season, one way or another," he said, referring to the civic group which owns the Colt All-America franchise.

That stand is the monkey wrench in plans for the 10-team NFL to adopt the AAC's only two money-makers, the Cleveland Browns and San Francisco 49ers, and run as a two-division, 12-team loop.

Embrey's intention of seeking an understanding with Redskin President George Marshall, reportedly the bitterest enemy of Balti-

Topping's 'If' Bid Accepted, Collins Says

New York, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Owner Ted Collins of the National Football League Boston Yanks accepted the strings-attached invitation to operate his team in Yankee Stadium today when he came to tentative terms with Yankee President Dan Topping.

It was another step toward peace in the three-year-old professional football war, but not the final one by any means.

Topping opened the door yesterday when he said he would fold up the All American Conference Yankee and rent Yankee Stadium to the Collins interests if it meant peace in the football war.

Collins lost no time stepping into the opening. "I met with Topping, Horace Stoneham, who owns the Polo Grounds, and the Mara brothers, who operate the New York Football Giants, last night," Collins said today.

Here is the result of their conversations:

If the Yankees do not operate in the All America Conference next season, the Boston Yanks will move into Yankee Stadium and take over the name, "New York Yankees."

If the Yanks do operate, then the Boston Yanks will go into the Polo Grounds on a "long-term lease" and will take over a new name not yet selected.

"That's the situation up to the moment," said Collins, who acquired millionaire stature shepherding songbird Kate Smith over the radio.

Cherry Reveals Redskin Confab

Austin, Tex., Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Football Coach Blair Cherry of the University of Texas said today he has had "preliminary talks" with two professional teams regarding a coaching position.

One of these was known to be the Washington Redskins.

Cherry said he had "made no decisions, and I do not plan to make any until I've had time to consider all the factors carefully."

Vince Leddy, Brown Pace GU to 4th Straight Win

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown, apparently hopelessly outdistanced early, rallied to a 53-49 decision over George Washington in a pulsating renewal of their intracity rivalry before 1625 last night at the Armory.

GW, determined to snap the Hoyas' three-game victory streak, sprinted to early leads of 13-1 and 18-4 and played like it never would be caught.

But, inspired by the performanc of Vince Leddy and Johnny Brown who hadn't done a thing in the first 20 minutes, the Hoyas relentlessly hacked away until they took the lead at 42-41 after 10:30 of the second half.

GW forged ahead again, 48-46, on a foul by Len Small when Elmer Ripley made one of the smartest substitutions of his career.

He inserted Dick Falvey and Falvey immediately made him look good by making an almost impossible dribble and layup. Dick then added a free throw and Georgetown was in front, 49-48, and in front for good.

Then Italo Ablondi tapped in the decisive field goal to make it, 51-48. Bill Cantwell, who fought his heart out in the losing cause and wound up with nine points converted a foul toss and GW was within a field goal.

Falvey Scores Clincher

In the last 20 seconds, the Hoyas added the clinching goal when Falvey broke loose and went all the way down the floor. He blew his shot but Ablondi was right on the spot and sank the final goal.

In the last analysis it was excessive fouling that cost GW the rough and tumble game. Not that Georgetown was accurate from the foul foot mark, missing 11 of 28 attempts, it was just that the Hoyas had more opportunities. The clubs were tied in field goals with 18 but the Colonials had only 17 foul tries, cashing 13.

It took Georgetown 6 minutes and 20 seconds to get its first field goal and by then GW, with Phil McNiff and Johnny Moffatt principally doing the scoring, had a 13-1 edge.

The Colonials increased their overwhelming margin to 18-4 before Falvey and John Kelly came into the game. Their presence seemed to steady Georgetown and a basket by the fiery Kelly finally cut the Colonial lead to 25-21.

McNiff retaliated with a field goal and three fouls and Cantwell came through with a basket to give GW a comfortable 32-24 halftime advantage.

Leddy Gets Started

Vince Leddy went on an 8-point rampage in the first five minutes after intermission to get the Hoyas back in the game. Ray Corley, held to two field goals, picked a good spot to sink a set shot from the side and then Tommy O'Keefe came through with a field goal to make it 42-41, Georgetown.

Georgetown frosh romped home in the preliminary game, turning back GW frosh, 61-42.

Penn Rallies To Beat Out Terps, 81-67

Philadelphia, Jan. 12.—The University of Maryland basketball team fell completely apart after holding an 11-point lead in the first half and dropped its seventh straight game tonight, losing to Pennsylvania, 81-67.

Herb Lyon, 6.04 Penn center, tallied 30 points to equal the Penn Palestra scoring record which he set last year.

Maryland, employing a cool, deliberate form of offense, looked unbeatable in the opening 20 minutes. Successive stabs by Siegrist and Smith sent the terps ahead, 4-0, at the start and they held on for a lead of -4.

Then sharpshooting Lyon showed his first bit of basket-hitting. Single-handed he sent the Penn score up seven points and achieved an 11-11 tie after eight minutes were gone.

The count was tied again at 13 but a Smith cut under the basket and an over-the-head shot by 6-foot 5-inch Bib Murray put Maryland out in front by four.

Maryland kept it a contest for only about five minutes in the second half.

Of Terps' Touring Testudo

Shapiro's Pals Confess 'Theft'

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

DAVE SHAPIRO'S fraternity brothers apparently aren't as honest as the GW basketball player who led four would-be bribers to jail last week. His Phi Alpha buddies now admit it was they who absconded with Testudo, Marylands oft-missing mascot, last year . . . The wanderings of Testudo, incidentally, resulted in some sort of a minus pool at College Park in 1948. According to the statistics of George Carroll, Maryland publicist, Testudo was returned five times more than he was reported missing . . . Nat Pitcher Sid Hudson, an instructor at the Griffs' Winter Garden, Fla., school, reports he's through throwing side-armed and will return to a full over-hand delivery this season . . . "The pain that I developed throwing overhand has gone and I can throw overhand as easily as ever now," he said . . . Ken Stribling and Smuggy Hursey, local middleweights, have been matched for the main event at Turner's Arena January 31.

OF THE 14 BASKETBALL Association of America games in which one team has scored at least 100 points, seven have been against the hapless Providence Steamrollers. The Rollers passed the 100 mark twice themselves, but lost each time . . . Coach Jack Hagerty of Georgetown, is due back from California Friday, where he interviewed many coaches for the three jobs open at Georgetown. He'll huddle with Hoya athletic officials over the weekend to choose three new assitants . . . Jack George, who was awarded a football scholarship to Notre Dame although many considered him an even better basketball player at St. John's, isn't allowed to play basketball with the Irish frosh on orders of Football Coach Frank Leahy.

MARYLAND and North Carolina have extended their football contract for four more years. The site of this year's game is still undecided. The Tar Heels have left the decision up to Maryland . . . Even the wrestling trust wants to be represented by its best attraction at next week's Inauguration. The boys are sending Gorgeous George to Turner's Arena for an Inaugural Eve bout . . . How accurate are pro basketball players? During the first 30 games of the Basketball Association of America, the sharpshooters connected on 10,006 of the 31,149 shots they took for a 32 per cent average . . . For the second straight year George Washington has come up with the outstanding Metro League football player. Last season it was Andy Davis. Next fall Jack Baumgartner, a fullback voted tops this season, will romp with the Colonial frosh . . . Turner's Arena asked and received an increase of 100 per cent for television rights for its boxing and wrestling matches for 1949.

Colts Plan To Meet Skins

more's inclusion in the new setup, was news to Marshall.

"Nobody from Baltimore has ever approached me on the subject," Marshall said yesterday. "I have been accused of leading the opposition to Baltimore, when actually I'd prefer to have Baltimore instead of San Francisco in the league as far as traveling expenses are concerned. And think of the wonderful rivalry we could work up with the Colts!"

"The fact is, however, that Baltimore has not been a money-making town," Marshall said. "Why should the National League take on a loser, when we already have some weak clubs of our own. I've said that before. I doubt that the other NFL owners will want to take in more than two AAC clubs. Where does that leave Baltimore?"

Observers were almost unanimous in the opinion it left Baltimore holding the key to the major league football problem. If the Colts insist on survival, the NFL will turn its back on the junior circuit, forcing it to operate alone next season or collapse.

A collapse, which isn't too far-fetched, would give the NFL its own way regardless, making it necessary to merely reactivate the Cleveland and San Francisco franchises in the senior league.

If, on the other hand, Baltimore peaceably steps out of the picture it is a virtual certainty there'll be just one major football league after next week's Chicago meetings.

Charlotte Hall Nips Central

Charlotte Hall fended off a determined, last-period bid by Central High to defeat the latter, 38-36, on the Central court.

Central, although it pecked away at a big Charlotte Hall lead, was never able to whittle it away entirely until one second after the final whistle had blown when Franny Gleason's layup was useless. Jimmy Pantos led the scoring with 14 points.

Tech Whips Riders, 43-38 Sgro Gets 24

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Using their reserves freely in a surprising second half rally, Wilson's Green Tigers upset Coolidge's aColts, 35-31, in the nightcap of an Interhigh basketball doubleheader yesterday before 1396 fans at the Armory.

In the first game, McKinley Tech encountered unexpected resistance from Roosevelt's Rough Riders, but drove to a 43-38 victory.

Wilson's win, its second straight, moved the Tigers into a tie for first place with Eastern. A nine-point scoring spree by chubby Leo Speros in the third quarter pushed Wilson from a 17-10 halftime deficit into a 27-25 lead.

INTERHIGH BASKETBALL STANDINGS

Subs Satisfy

With that two-point edge as the last quarter started, Wilson's Coach Hank Bristor replaced his first team with five fresh men, planning to reinsert his regulars after a three-minute rest.

However, the second unit, with Preston Kavanaugh grabbing the rebounds, and Rommie Linney whipping in three layups, boosted the margin over the tiring Colts. With 2:35 left, the Wilson reserves were ahead, 33-29, so Bristor let them finish out the game.

Six-foot 4-inch Byron Anderson scored five points in the first three minutes to help spark Coolidge's fine showing in the early stages. But he drew four quick fouls, and had to play cautiously the rest of the way.

The Colts' ineptitude at the foul line cost them heavily. After missing 17 out of 20 free throws against Central last week, Coolidge made only five out of 15 yesterday.

Sgro Scores 24 Points

Roosevelt's poor showing at the line also set the Riders back. They made good on only 6 out of 19 attempts. However, the 24 points of Tony Sgro were the most important factors in the Tech triumph.

Tech held the lead from the second minute until the third quarter. In that hectic third eight-minute period, the lead changed hands six times. In the first minute of the last period, Franny Frain put in a corner setshot, and Tech went ahead to stay, 33—32.

Rookie Ed Graham, a sharp setshooting specialist, gave Roosevelt a big lift in the third quarter as he put in three long ones. Scoring honors for the Riders went, however, to Bob Zamsky with nine.

Jury Indicts Alleged Briber In Fulks Case

Philadelphia, Jan. 12 (AP).—A 33-year-old poolroom operator was indicted today on a charge of trying to bribe Joe Fulks, high-scoring star for the Philadelphia Warriors.

Fulks swore out a warrant against Morris (Moxie) Fleishman on December 10, asserting that Fleishman offered him "easy money" if he would "throw games" in the professional Basketball Association of America.

A grand jury listened to 15 minutes of testimony today and then handed up a true bill against Fleishman. He is at liberty under $1500 bail. The trial probably will be held in April.

Only three persons testified before the grand jury. They were Fulks, Coach Eddie Gottlieb of the Warriors and Detective Jerry Foley.

Americo V. Cortese, assistant district attorney, said that the bill of indictment was drawn up under a law never intended to apply to bribery in athletic cases. The indictment accuses Fleishman of "unlawfully offering a bribe to an employe of the Arena Corp. (which owns the Warriors) to the prejudice of the employer." It carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail or a fine of $500, or both.

Cortese told reporters there is a Pennsylvania law applying to athletic contests which carries a heavier penalty but that when the legislators passed it, they forgot to include basketball.

Retired Mike Kelley, 73, Tells Griffith, Mack to Stay on Job

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA., Jan. 12 (AP).—"Don't retire."

That's Mike Kelley's advice to Connie Mack and Clark Griffith.

The 73-year-old Kelley, spending the winter at the Gulf beaches here, is a peer of Mack and Griffith when it comes to long service in baseball. When he sold the Minneapolis Millers in 1946 he had completed 52 years as player, manager and owner.

The abdicated "Dean of the Minor Leagues" speaks of knowing Griffith for 50 years and Mack for 65.

"I heard a while back that Griff was going to sell the Senators and retire," Kelley said. "I wrote him a letter telling him not to and why. Griff wrote back that he read my letter over four or five times. And he's still running the Senators."

Kelley makes no bones about missing baseball.

"Since I retired," he quipped, "I haven't been mad at anybody and nobody's been mad at me," which is an Irishman's way of saying that retirement is not so good.

Kelley has a legion of friends in baseball and is by no means a forgotten man. He was guest of honor at the minor leagues convention in Minneapolis last month.

Minneapolis' "Mr. Baseball" owned the Millers from 1923 until he sold out in 1946.

He played first base for the old Baltimore Orioles and so remembers John McGraw well. The late Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the first commissioner of baseball, was another of his friends.

Mack and Griffith rate tops in Kelley's book, but his friends cover the entire history of baseball up to and including Ted Williams.

He had Williams at Minneapolis when the splendid splinter was 18. And Kelley has a soft spot in his heart for the temperamental slugger.

Eddie Arcaro Draws 10-Day Ban

Anita Cites Interference By Jockey

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 12 (AP).—Eddie Arcaro, the Nation's stake riding champion, today was suspended for 10 days at Santa Anita by stewards who said he caused interference in Tuesday's sixth race.

The little Italian rider, said the stewards, came over sharply with the horse Rising Prices, causing a serious mixup in the race, which was won by Bradentown. Rising Prices finished second. During his suspension, Arcaro will be permitted to fill stakes engagements on file with the stewards.

Mrs. L. D. Bennett's M'Dearsy won today's Santa Anita feature, a $7500 handicap at seven furlongs for fillies and mares. Gordon Glisson, the track's leading apprentice, got M'Dearsy home by a neck over the fast closing Hemet Squaw in 1:25⅗. The winner paid $9.40. Alablue got the show.

Stepfather, winner of last week's $50,000 Santa Catalina, today was assigned 119 pounds for Saturday's $50,000 special, the San Pasqual Handicap at a mile and one-sixteenth. On Trust, the horse he beat by a neck last week, drops two pounds and gets 124.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Program of Employe Reforms Is Drafted By Civil Service

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION is drafting a program of employe reforms that it will soon ask Congress to write into law. Likely to be recommended in its legislative program will be:

A suggestion that it be given greater authority over the salaries paid the 500,000 so-called wage board and ungraded employes. The commission will emphasize the general lack of uniformity in dealing with per diem employes as between the two groups.

A revision of the Veterans' Preference Act to provide 5 or 10 preference points for only those veterans who make passing grades on Civil Service tests, and to give 10 points only to those veterans who have compensable injuries; (Senator Cain (R., Wash.) has in a bill along this line.)

A sweeping revision of the salary-fixing Classification Act—an overhauling that would allow Civil Service to delegate to the various agencies the authority to fix the salaries of their jobs, subject to a post-audit by the commission.

That the allowance for Federal workers who travel on official business be raised from $6 to $10 a day;

That the commission be given the authority to appoint all postmasters through the regular competitive Civil Service system and that the present practice of Senate confirmation be abolished;

That the law that prevents Federal workers from working at and being paid for two or more Government jobs simultaneously be simplified, and liberalized, and finally,

That scientific and professional employes be given sabbatical leave every 10 years, and that their agencies be given the authority to send them to colleges and universities at any time for additional training.

MON WALLGREN is being built up to be chairman of the Maritime Commission. Alaskan and Northwestern shipping interests are quietly backing the former Governor of Washington State for the post. A close friend of the President's, Wallgren is moving here with his family. He has been promised a top Federal job, but which one has been an open question. Wallgren has substantial backing for the maritime post, although it is not his first choice of several possible jobs.

BRYAN HOUSTON has resigned as information director of the Economic Cooperation Administration to go into the advertising business on the West Coast. His successor may be JACK ADAMS of Columbia Broadcasting.

REPRESENTATIVE WALTER (D., Pa.), will have several hundred patronage jobs to dole out on the House side of the Capitol. He's the new chairman of the House Democratic Patronage Committee. To date, very few personnel changes have been made on Capitol Hill since the Democrats regained control. A number of switches, however, are slated to be made in the next month.

BEP: The Bureau of Engraving and Printing will ask Congress for additional funds to meet the cost of an 11 per cent pay raise to its skilled workers. However, Treasury officials haven't decided whether to wait until they actually get the money to pay the higher salaries, or to do it immediately.

LUNCHES: The President's plan for the Government to take over operation of cafeterias and recreation activities on Federal property should result in better and cheaper meals for Government workers here.

At least, that's the goal of both the Budget Bureau and the Federal Works Agency, which are working on a plan of operation to be presented soon to Congress.

It will be suggested that the new self-sustaining Government corporation be set up in FWA, and that Interior be represented on the board, since recreation projects are in its National Parks.

The corporation would not need to pay rent and it could use profits to subsidize losing operations. GSI, for example, must share its profits with Uncle Sam. If there is any subsidizing, recreation profits would be used to cut cafeteria costs. It won't the other way around.

100% Boost In District's Liquor Fees Under Study

Two Revenue Bills, Including 2% Sales Tax, Being Drafted For Commissioners

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A 100 per cent increase on alcoholic beverage license fees and on gallonage taxes is being considered by the District Commissioners, it was learned last night.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West has been directed to prepare two revenue-raising measures for consideration by the city heads and submission later to the Bureau of the Budget.

The first bill calls for a 2 per cent general sales tax, coupled with increased exemptions on personal income and business taxes. The second covers the doubling of the liquor fees and taxes.

Commissioner Guy Mason, who supervises activities of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, last month recommended the 100 per cent boost on the distilled spirits, declaring the change would bring liquor taxes here more nearly in line with those of Maryland, as well as provide needed additional revenue.

Mason, however, recommended exempting beer from the over-all tax boost because it is the "poor man's drink." The proposed measure includes beer in the step-up program, it was learned.

The estimated yield from the wine, champagne and spirits gallonage tax for the fiscal year 1949, which ends June 30, is two million dollars. An additional $790,919 was collected in alcoholic beverage license fees during the fiscal 1949.

Doubling the taxes and fees would bring in an estimated 5½ million dollars from this source. The budget sent to Capitol Hill this week by the President indicates an 8-million-dollar deficit if a sales tax is not approved and an 18-million-dollar shortage if a retroactive pay raise for District workers is passed on top of this.

At present, the tax per gallon on wine is 10 cents; on champagne, 15 cents, and other spirits, 50 cents. In Maryland, the spirits tax is $1.20, according to Commissioner Mason.

Puzzling Bequest

Cornell University in Ithaca, N. Y., will receive more than $400,000 under the will of a deceased Washington insurance man, and the university officials are puzzled.

The bequest is in the will of the late Courtlandt P. Hull, jr., who died here on December 19, at the age of 87. The will was filed for probate yesterday in District Court.

Another provision gives the principal of a $90,000 trust fund to the Corcoran Gallery of Art here. However, to be eligible to the money, the gallery management must agree to exhibit in a separate room Hull's collection of early Americana and other antiques.

Failing this, Corcoran relinquishes the $90,000 and the antiques to the residue of the estate, which eventually goes to Cornell.

Officials of Cornell, when told of the will by a reporter, searched their records and said Hull never was a student there and never was connected with the school in any ascertainable way. They said his name did not appear in the genealogical table of Ezra Cornell, the school father, either. Furthermore, they failed to find Hull's parents on their lists.

Hull was a bachelor and for the last 20 years lived in an apartment at 1302 18th st. nw. He came here from New York and was connected with the Lincoln Assurance Co.

Court papers list in addition to the $90,000 trust to which another person is a lifetime beneficiary, personal property of $417,500. Attorneys for the estate here are N. A. Townsend and Seymour Sheriff.

Out of the money, Emma B. Shepard, 1455 W st. nw., described as Hull's maid, gets $2500. Carrie L. Harris, his deceased sister's maid of Stamford, Conn., gets $60 a month for life and Charles W. Archer, his chauffeur of East Norwalk, Conn., gets $2500.

On their death, the entire fund goes to Cornell to establish a Henrietta W. Hull Memorial Fund in honor of Hull's mother.

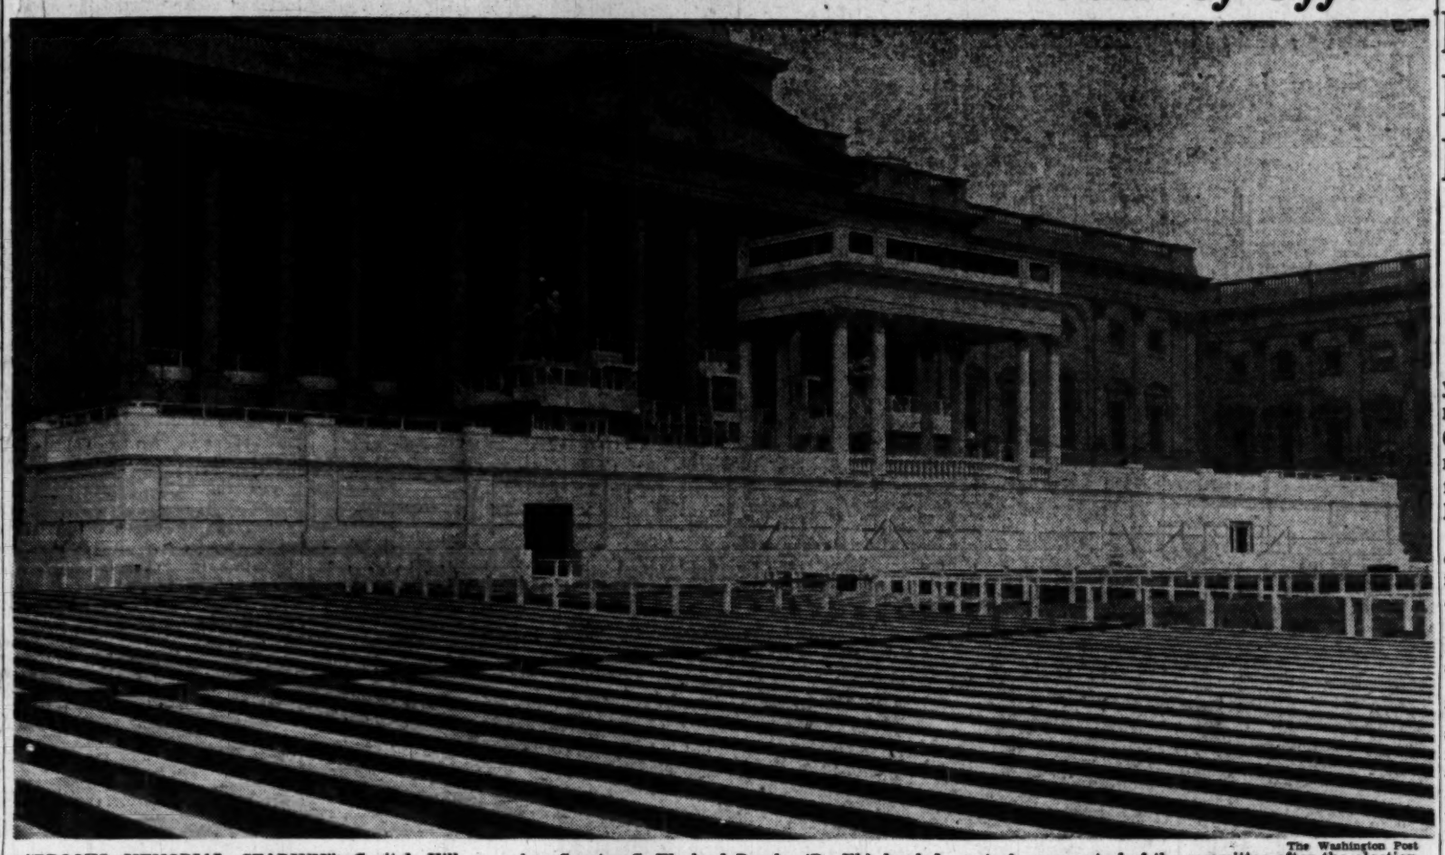
Miss Gladys L. Yoman, of New York, a fourth cousin, said she often visited Hull and was surprised at the Cornell gift. She is one of the lifetime beneficiaries.

"Mr. Hull was educated in a Plainfield, N. J. high school and never went to college," she declared.

Where President Truman Will Take the Oath of Office



The Washington Post

"BROOKS MEMORIAL STADIUM"—Capitol Hill wags call the inaugural stand east of the Capitol the "Curley Brooks Memorial Stadium." It was so termed because the elaborate structure was planned when Senator C. Wayland Brooks (R., Ill.) headed a GOP-dominated joint congressional inaugural committee before the Truman victory that incidentally swept Brooks out of office. Democrats who took over control of the committee after the election went ahead with the original plans which were already well advanced. (See Inaugural story on Page 1)

Fire Hazards Charged to 17 Night Clubs

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Seventeen night clubs, restaurants and amusement centers here were accused yesterday of permitting fire hazards, as the Fire Department announced a pre-Inauguration Week crackdown.

Officials of the accused establishments were haled before Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King. Six of the firms agreed to forfeit collateral. Three chose to face criminal charges in Municipal Court. Eight were warned without formal charges.

Fire Inspectors J. R. Chase and L. R. Cruickshank cited the firms after a city-wide New Year's Eve survey in which efforts were made to prevent overcrowding.

Fire Exits Unlit, Locked

The complaints charged that required fire exits were unlit, blocked off, latched or locked.

Meanwhile, Fire Marshal R. C. Roberts disclosed he will tighten fire inspections during Inauguration Week. One squad of inspectors will check hotels and another will visit theaters, night clubs, restaurants and other sizable establishments.

"This move is in the interest of public safety due to the inevitable overcrowding we'll have here during the inaugural," he said.

The firms which agreed before King to forfeit collateral were:

Republic Gardens, 1355 U st. nw., $100 collateral; Club 400, 1423 F st. nw., $50; Caverns Club, 2005 11th st. nw., $50; Windsor Room, 1411 H st. nw., $50; Off Beat Club, 1849 7th st. nw., $25, and the Uptown Lounge, 3433 Connecticut ave. nw., $25.

Glover, jr., first vice president; Joshua Evans, jr., second vice president; Mrs. Howard C. Davidson, third vice president; Edward W. Fay, treasurer; Francis Murray, assistant treasurer, and Mrs. Leonard A. Block, secretary.

Reelected were the following board members: Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall, Mrs. Leonard A. Block, Joshua Evans, jr., Mrs. J. William Fulbright, Mrs. Charles C. Glover, jr., John Ihlder, Mrs. Milton King, Mrs. B. W. Thoren, Edward W. Fay, Mrs. John Whitten and Mrs. Wilbur K. Miller.

Tract Purchase Approved

District Commissioners have approved the purchase of a small tract of land at 25th and N sts. nw. as an addition to the Francis Recreational Center there. The addition, which will be purchased by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, will permit laying out of regulation-size football and baseball fields.

Double Service

Restaurants Planning for Jan. 20 Jam

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

The modest "short order" is better than a long shot to become the diner's delight when Washington bulges at the seams for President Truman's inauguration on January 20.

The Washington Restaurant Association said its members serve an average of 1,250,000 meals during a normal 24-hour period. On January 20, they expect to serve twice as many.

Even so, the Restaurant Association, with 1200 members handling 85 per cent of the volume of prepared food in the metropolitan area, says the swollen city can and will be served on Inauguration Day.

Will Trim Menu

There will be plenty of old-fashioned square meals available, but most of the District's restaurateurs expect to double their average daily service by (1) cutting down on the number of items on the menu, and (2) increasing their working staffs.

Furthermore, says the Restaurant Association, most of the city's eateries "definitely will not raise prices." A portion of the "more exclusive" restaurants will charge Sunday and holiday rates, according to present plans.

The Board of Trade estimates some 250,000 visitors are about all the city can absorb. Unofficial guesses, however, have placed the expected number nearer 500,000.

A number of "concessions" will be set up in downtown restaurants, the association disclosed, so patrons can take food out. The Inaugural Committee also has authorized 30 concession stands to dispense food along the parade route.

Some to Stay Open Late

"Perhaps 15 per cent of the downtown restaurants will stay open later that night to accommodate the crowds," an association official said.

The biggest drain on restaurants is expected between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. The parade, which starts at 1 p. m., should last 2½ hours, committee officials have estimated.

Contributing to the swarms of food-seekers will be many of the 85,000 persons served daily in Government cafeterias. If Congress declares Thursday and Friday holidays—a likely prospect—all but four of the Government's 38 cafeterias will be shut down.

Robert R. Ayers, manager of Government Services, Inc., said cafeterias at the Federal Trade Commission, the Postoffice, Executive Building and Treasury Department—all along the parade route—will remain open Thursday. They will accommodate Government workers with passes issued for admittance to the buildings.

About 3000 persons will be served soup and sandwiches in these locations, Ayers said.

The Arlington Farms housing project, where 2000 persons are served three meals daily, will continue to operate, he added.

An official of the Washington Hotel Association said meals will be served on a "business as usual" basis in most of the city's hostelries. Many will have additional personnel on duty.

Lecture on Colorado

H. Raymond Gregg, chief naturalist, National Capital Parks, will describe "Colorado Wonderands" tonight at 8 in the Interior Department auditorium, 18th and C sts. nw.

County Board Clears Chief Of Accusation

Prince Georges County Police Chief Ralph W. Brown yesterday was "exonerated" by the county police commissioners "of any statement made against him" in the Keleher divorce suit in District Court.

Mrs. Anna T. Keleher, who seeks a limited divorce from once-convicted gambler John B. Keleher, has testified her husband told her he had police protection in Prince Georges County.

The following statement was issued by Linden Briscoe, clerk to the county commissioners (who also sit as police commissioners) after a closed meeting yesterday:

"The board of police commissioners on this date had Superintendent Brown of the Prince Georges County police appear before the board in connection with the story of the divorce case now pending in the District of Columbia, and Superintendent Brown made this statement:

"'There is nothing to the story. This place (two apartments at 3205 Rhode Island ave. ne. in Mount Rainier, Md., raided by county and Mount Rainier police Tuesday after Mrs. Keleher had testified it was her husband's gambling headquarters) I am sure has been closed since we closed the gambling places in the county (September 1947).

"'As far as I am concerned, it has not been running. I went there yesterday . . .'"

Chief Brown then went on to describe the place and concluded: "'I questioned the janitor of the building who had been there two months and he told me he had no knowledge of any gambling going on since he had lived there.'

"The board feels," the statement concluded, "that after investigation there is nothing to the story and exonerates the superintendent of any statement made against him."

Union Asked to Note Civil Service Week

James G. Yaden, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, yesterday urged the 52,000 members of his union to observe National Civil Service Week. He spoke at a luncheon of the District of Columbia Elks Club at 919 H st. nw.

The observance from January 16 to 22 commemorates founding of the Civil Service Commission 66 years ago.

Wife Seized His $80,000 Stake, Keleher Testifies at Trial

John B. Keleher yesterday in District Court charged that his wife arranged for him to go to Florida in January, 1946, then cleaned out their safe-deposit boxes of $80,000 in cash, instead of the $30,000 she has admitted taking.

Mrs. Anna T. Keleher, who seeks a limited divorce from once-convicted gambler John B. Keleher, has testified her husband told her he had police protection in Prince Georges County.

The once-convicted Washington gambler made his charges during court proceedings in which his wife, Mrs. Anna T. Keleher, is asking for a limited divorce. He is countersuing. Both charge cruelty.

Earlier in yesterday's hearing, Keleher explained that Tuesday he had erroneously testified he knew about four telephone calls to Paterson, N. J., made in December, 1948, from 3205 Rhode Island ave. ne., Mount Rainier, Md., where his wife charges he operates a gambling establishment.

"I retired from my business at that address in January, 1948. When I was questioned about those four telephone calls I was confused and mixed up December, 1947, with December, 1948," he declared.

Asked About Business

"Just what type of business were you in? Mrs. Keleher's lawyer, James J. Laughlin, demanded.

"I don't care to answer that on the grounds I might incriminate myself," Keleher replied.

"Was all of the $80,000 yours?" Laughlin asked.

"No. I owed about $19,000 of it," was the answer.

Laughlin then introduced a photostat of papers for a loan of $10,000 which Keleher received from the Security Savings & Commercial Bank, after putting up 1000 shares of United States Steel stock as collateral, about six months before the money was taken from the boxes.

"Can you tell us why you borrowed that money when you had $80,000 cash in the deposit boxes?" he demanded.

"No, sir," was all Keleher replied.

"Just why did you keep that much in the deposit boxes?" Laughlin queried.

"I needed it as cash lots of times in my business. I might need it after banking hours. Sometimes the bank didn't have large bills like a thousand-dollar bill. For no particular reason—just to keep it safe," was Keleher's answer.

Laughlin asked Keleher if he remembered taking two of Mrs. Keleher's bracelets to the Liberty National Bank about 10 years ago and walking out after leaving them lying on the counter. Keleher smilingly agreed the incident had happened.

"Isn't it true that you were sometimes confused about your money too?" Laughlin demanded.

"No sir. Never about my money," Keleher replied emphatically.

Keleher said he pleaded with Mrs. Keleher to tell him what she had done with the money after he learned she had taken it.

"I had a heart-to-heart talk with her. Dolly, I said, we're getting too old for these kind of troubles. We don't need lawyers or anybody. Just make some kind of an accounting. If you spent some of it, it will be all right. But I'm entitled to some kind of explanation," he declared.

Kelehers' Home Life

"All she'd say was that she didn't know what I was talking about. But, then, once she said sarcastically that if she had taken anything, it was spent," he added.

Keleher also testified that one night he took Mrs. Keleher some oyster stew, after she had called him at his place of business and told him to eat dinner out because she didn't feel well.

"When I got home, she had been drinking and she was staggering. She threw the oyster stew down the sink," he declared.

"Haven't you ever been staggering? Don't you remember an incident when you started kicking furniture and threw a chair at a mirror because one of your horses came in last?" Laughlin asked.

Keleher denied that he had ever contributed to the expenses of Mrs. Dorothy Blake, against whom Mrs. Keleher had filed a $250,000 alienation of affections suit.

He admitted that Mrs. Blake, who lives at the Dorchester House, keeps her Cadillac roadster in the garage of the nearby Hotel 2400, where he lives, and that the $25 monthly garage rent is placed on his bill.

Mrs. Blake's Meals

"Mrs. Blake has offered to pay back that $25 a month but she's been so nice about dinner and breakfast, I've been ashamed to accept it," he explained. He said he ate frequently at Mrs. Blake's apartment.

Mrs. Blake then took the stand to say she had known Keleher for 12 to 14 years. She has not had any occupation for the last seven years, she said.

However, she receives an annual income of more than $3250 from stocks she owns, the witness declared.

"I have 1000 shares of stock in the Federal Bake Shops, which I purchased gradually during my 20 years as an executive of that company. I have another 1000 shares of Republic Steel stock, which I purchased after selling my house, when I was divorced here in 1942 from Milton Blake," she explained.

Following this testimony, the trial was recessed until 10 a. m. today.

Frank Erickson Called Czar Of Million-a-Day Betting Ring

Frank Erickson is czar of a New Jersey gambling ring that handles a million dollars a day in bets from New York City, the New York Star said yesterday in a copyright story.

The name of Erickson, often described as the biggest bookmaker in the country, was injected into the Keleher divorce trial here Tuesday.

The New York Star said the Nation-wide gambling syndicate that was driven from New York by the late Mayor LaGuardia now has its East Coast headquarters across the Hudson River in Paterson, N. J.

"The syndicate," said the newspaper account, "is owned and operated by New York mobsters, serviced by countless hoodlums. The gross take, including bets placed by others than New Yorkers, is almost half a billion dollars a year."

The horse rooms, said the New York Star, flourish in Passaic and Bergen Counties in New Jersey and, although they open and close frequently, the law has never put them out of operation.

College football and basketball betting swells the syndicate's take, the newspaper's investigators reported, but the horses are the big play.

"It is known," said the New York Star, "that the bookmaking industry in the United States—and it is one of the largest native industries—is in the pudgy hands of Frank Erickson, whose only ostensible business connection is an innocent motion picture exchange in Cliffside Park, N. J.

(The Washington Post called the motion picture exchange and was told that Erickson was not there, that nobody knew where he could be reached and that nobody knew his home telephone number.—Editor's note.)

"It is known that his principal lieutenant is Joe Adonis, the Brooklyn mobster who moved to Fort Lee, N. J., in April, 1944."

According to the New York Star, the syndicate's nerve center—where race results are received by direct telephone wire from the race tracks throughout the United States and rebroadcast, also by direct wire, to the hundreds of horse rooms in New Jersey—is in a run-down residential district in Paterson, at the corner of 18th and Warren sts.

$271,000 Deficiency Fund Asked For Gallinger

American College Of Surgeons Gives Hospital Rating Of 'Full Approval'

The District health officer yesterday asked District Commissioners to approve a $271,000 deficiency appropriation request for medical supplies food and fuel for Gallinger Hospital.

The plea was happily but coincidentally bolstered by news later in the day that the institution was awarded a "full approval" rating by the American College of Surgeons, after the first postwar inspection there.

The college, recognized nationally for its severe inspection standards, credited Gallinger with meeting 90 per cent of full standards set up by the accreditation group. Only in its anesthetic service did Gallinger fail badly, the inspection team reported.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, told the Commissioners in his funds request that though sufficient supplies are on hand for immediate needs, there is not enough money left to carry Gallinger through to the end of the current fiscal year, June 30.

$164,000 for Drugs

Some $164,000, including $90,000 for penicillin alone, will be needed for drugs and other medical supplies, he said. Another $49,000 will be required for food; $43,000 for fuel, and $15,000 for other maintenance items.

The high price set on penicillin needs was explained by hospital officials as due largely to recent discontinuation of the cheaper form of the antibiotic.

Other drug needs, totaling $30,000, include streptomycin, found effective against the deadly military tuberculosis, it was said.

Justification for the use of the expensive drugs was given by Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, Health Department coordinator of health and hospitals, who cited a decline in hospitalization period statistics for the institution. In 1945, Dr. Seckinger said, the hospital stay average for a patient was 19.6 days.

"This has now been reduced to 14 days, largely by liberal use of expensive drugs," Dr. Seckinger said.

Yesterday's deficiency appropriation request further emphasized the hospital's predicament in its current budget request to Congress for 1949-50 operations. District Commissioners approved but $20,000 extra over the current appropriation of $212,000 for medical supplies though the hospital had asked a $64,000 increase. Similarly, the Commissioners cut the requested food fund increase of $135,000 to $75,000.

The American College of Surgeons report was issued yesterday as its findings in a recent, intensive inspection made at Gallinger. By scoring 90 per cent, the hospital easily qualified for "full approval," which is granted for as low as a 70 per cent rating in the standards tests.

A 5 per cent loss in Gallinger's score was charged up to the hospital's high mortality rate in anesthetic service. The study reported a death rate from anesthesia of 1 fatality for every 941 administrations.

Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney, hospital superintendent, blamed the rate on lack of sufficient personnel. He said this lack forces anesthesia teams to spread their work too thinly in efforts to carry out all the duties required of them.

Gallinger Hospital, its superintendent said, now has four doctors, two nurses and three visiting anesthesiologists to handle the work of seven operating suites and several delivery rooms. Two more doctors and two more anesthetists have been requested in the new budget, he said.

The recent inspection at Gallinger was the ACS's first there since December, 1942, and the first under its new point count, a percentage rating system devised within the past two years, it was explained. In the 1942 inspection, Gallinger got top rating in the three-catagory ratings.

European Need Of Tourist Trade Stressed

The importance of American tourists to European recovery was stressed yesterday by Sir Alexander Maxwell, chairman of the British Tourist and Holidays Board, at a luncheon sponsored by the American Automobile Association in the Mayflower Hotel.

American tourists will spend an estimated 2.5 billion dollars in Europe during the next four years, according to a recent study, Sir Alexander said.

These dollars are particularly important because they will be earned by countries deficient in natural resources through personal services, he said, as distinct from money earned by the production of goods with heavy imports of raw materials.

England's "Come to Britain" campaign attracted 500,000 travelers during 1948, he said, 100,000 of them Americans, who spent a total of 50 million dollars.

British facilities have been expanded, Sir Alexander told the association guests, and as a result the average stay of visitors has risen from a prewar average of five days to a 1948 average of 18 days.

Among the luncheon guests were the British Ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks; Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John S. Graham, Assistant Secretary of Commerce Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., Admiral Emery S. Land, president of the Air Transport Association; Senator Owen Brewster, (R., Me.), Ruth Shipley, chief of the passport division of the Department of State, and Walter Radius, director of the office of transportation of the Department of State.

Sir Alexander returns to England this week after a coast-to-coast speaking tour on behalf of the British tourist industry.

Body in Apartment Kitchen

Bullet Ends Ex-Colonel's Life, And Strauss Waltz Plays On

The body of a retired Army officer who died with a bullet through his brain to the soft strains of a Strauss waltz was found yesterday in his Arlington apartment.

When police entered the apartment at 4:45 p. m., they found Col. George E. Mitchell, jr., 47, pajama clad, sitting in a kitchen chair.

Waltz Playing Endlessly

On the automatic record player, playing endlessly, was the "Voices of Spring Waltz," by Johann Strauss.

The record apparently had been playing continuously for six or eight hours, for Dr. W. C. Welburn, Arlington County coroner, estimated Mitchell had been dead that long.

On the kitchen floor near the body police found a .38-caliber automatic Colt pistol. The dead man's left arm also rested on the drain board, and only inches from his clenched hand were a partially filled glass of whisky and whisky bottle about two-thirds full.

No note was found. However, police said they found no evidence of foul play and Dr. Welburn said he would issue a certificate of suicide.

The body of Mitchell, a West Pointer and former career Army officer, was discovered by Col. Henry H. Duval, of 1501 Mt. Eagle pl., Alexandria, also a retired officer.

Duval, who has been associated in private business with Mitchell, said when Mitchell did not show up for work yesterday or telephone to explain his absence he decided to investigate. He said he was aware that Mitchell suffered from a heart condition that might require medical aid.

At Barcroft, when there was no response to raps on Mitchell's door, Duval went to the manager's office and a maintenance man opened the apartment with a pass key.

When the body was discovered, Duval telephoned the office of the Military District of Washington, which in turn notified Arlington County police.

Police said they understood Mitchell's wife and 13-year-old son had departed Monday for St. Louis, Mo., where the son is to enter school. They said they did not know where to reach the wife.

Mitchell has no known relatives here except an uncle at Fort Meade, police said. They did not disclose the uncle's name.

Neighbors told police they had not heard the sound of the shot, but had heard the waltz record playing endlessly.

Duval said he believed Mitchell was graduated with the West Point class of 1922 and had served in the Army until his retirement in 1945 or 1946 because of his heart condition. He said Mitchell had served overseas during the last war.

THE Beauty Of a Simple Ceremony
A SIMPLE ceremony that costs very little money may still possess a simple dignity and beauty that money alone could not give.
It depends, of course, not on the amount of money spent, but on the taste and care exercised by those you choose and trust to spend it.
We ourselves find special satisfaction in showing how much plain economy can achieve in lending loveliness and grace to a solemn occasion.

Necklines Hit New Lows In Manhattan Collections

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, JAN. 12.—Necklines on the new spring and summer clothes are really something to write home about. They're way down to here, both fore and aft.

The trend toward daring and provocative bodices invades practically every collection here at the New York Dress Institute's fashion showings. It is carried out in clothing for every hour of the day; in every kind of fabric, from cotton to damask.

Last summer we saw bare-topped dresses invade the office and street. But at least they had shoulder straps. Can't say the same for the ones they have cut out for us next summer. It's all done with wires.

Every once in a while you think you see a smartly tailored suit dress. Then the model whisks off the jacket and there it is again—the strapless bodice. When there is no jacket or bolero, there is a stole, shawl, fichu or shoulder cape.

Necklines in the one-piece "after 5" dresses are cut at spectacular depths and angles. They are described by the show commentators as being scooped out, fitted, fluted, shirred and so forth. Frequently they are so wide that they fail to cover the shoulders. In back they're apt to hit a new low also. Collars often frame the shoulders in stand-up effects.

All in all, the necklines seem to go everywhere but up around the neck. They may not be becoming to everyone, but few will find them dull.

Designed for Career Women

The strapless, low-neckline vogue was dramatized effectively in two of today's showings. These were the lines shown by Adele Simpson and Ceil Chapman, both of whom have many devotees among Washington women. Dark-haired Miss Simpson likes to create clothes for high-powered career gals, those who lead busy, active lives.

She does sleek little dress-up costumes with "take-off" jackets. The latter is frequently a short, swinging type. Underneath is a sunback or wide-necked dress. Miss Simpson does these in a wide variety of fabrics, ranging from opalescent cotton to printed silk this season.

'Dreamy' Formals for the Younger Set

Ball gowns for the young set are a specialty with Ceil Chapman and this summer she is not going to disappoint her clients. She showed "dreamy" formals that any young girl will adore. Her silhouette for dance dresses takes the form of overlarge skirts, fashioned of organza or net over hooped taffeta petticoats. But the bodices are minute, with not a single shoulder strap in the lot.

Miss Chapman also has some short above-ankle-length dresses which can only be described as "formals." They are strapless, backless, with the skirts draped tightly to the figure. Sophisticated young women will want to see the dresses of this type which she has made of silk jersey. They have all kinds of "come hither."

There were many other important and interesting collections shown today, but space will not permit us to describe them all. Ben Reig, one of the high-fashion designers, showed a line that was distinctive for its extremely slim skirts. Full, flared or draped skirts took a back seat, reserved almost entirely for formal evening wear.

Other showings included those of Herbert Sondheim, the Bruno collection for spectator sports, and several hat collections. We'll describe the latter in Sunday's Washington Post, together with pictures of some of the outstanding chapeaux.

PROVOCATIVE is the word for necklines in the New York spring and summer collections now being previewed by the fashion press. Bodices are cut spectacularly low in both daytime and "after 5" gowns. Some drop below the shoulders like the "photogenic neckline" above

IN BACK, too, necklines scoop down to a new low

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Are Your Children Your Friends?

That's a rather startling question when you stop to think about it. Probably not many of us parents ever have considered such a thing. And yet, isn't it important?

Too often we are so busy being parents that we haven't time to be friends. We feel the responsibility of seeing that children walk in the paths that they should go to the extent that the fun of companionship is lost by the wayside.

Children crave friendship with their parents. You may remember the times when, as a child, you went on walks with one or both of your parents or did other things with them in which you could be relaxed and comfortable. It may have been the bedtime conversation in which Dad talked man-to-man or Mother chatted woman-to-woman. If you can't remember such experiences it's a good idea to see to it that your children will be able to do so.

As children begin to grow up, friendships within the family can become more and more meaningful for much of the discipline that parents have to use with younger children is no longer necessary. The goal of all of us as parents should be that of seeing to it that our children are our friends from childhood through adult life.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Lovely Girl, Close Friend, Informs Wife That Husband Called Her for Dates, Which He Denies, But Wife Is Frantic With Worry

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I have been married seven years and have a small daughter. Several months ago I was under a doctor's care for migraine headaches, and during treatment I became quite friendly with the office nurse and we exchanged visits when she was off duty.

On two occasions the nurse, Joyce, was included in dancing parties as our guest. She is a lovely creature, in my opinion, and I do believe she is a worthwhile friend.

The problem is that just recently I was called out of town for several days to attend a brother-in-law's burial in a distant city, and on my return home Joyce came to see me and out of a clear sky told me that while I was away my husband called her twice to ask her out on drinking parties with him.

Wife's Been Loyal to Her Obligations

Naturally I resented this breach of trust on Larry's part. I have always been a faithful wife and devoted mother, and have stayed home day after day, taking care of my responsibilities in a proper way. When I asked Larry for an explanation, he simply said, "It's a lie," and refused to comment further.

Now I am terribly upset, in fact almost crazy with distress; and I pray you to help me clarify my mind and get back on the right track, if possible. Having read your column for a long while, I know you've given wise counsel in similar crises; so please help me.

E. P.

Nothing Much to Fret About

DEAR E. P.: You don't specify whether or not Joyce accepted Larry's invitations, but I should infer that she did, then hastened to you to make a clean breast of it, to satisfy her conscience as best she could and take the "dates" out of the furtive category, on her part at least.

If such is the story, the sequence of her behavior would indicate that she responded thoughtlessly to Larry's suggestion of whiling away a couple of evenings in his company during your absence, and with no feeling, at the time, of being a party to "guilty" connivance,—and only later, perhaps in anxious reaction to further brashness on Larry's part, began to feel she'd acted foolishly or maybe disreputably, and ought to confess to you and square herself.

One sympathizes with your shock-reaction; but you've got something to be thankful for, in the fact that Joyce forthrightly put you wise before gossip reached you, and so prepared you to dismiss it with dignity, in case busybodies come in person to probe your reflexes.

Man's Denial Is Reassuring

ALSO, her candor with you, which at once put Larry "on the spot," was bound to prejudice him against her, as she surely realized; so here is an angle to indicate that she doesn't want, and he won't pursue, any further subrosa exchange; and therefore I believe you may consider the incident closed. I see no reason to brood over it as a threat to your married security.

Your hysteria is extravagantly disproportionate to Larry's misdemeanor, which, though wounding, isn't cause for distracted concern. And inasmuch as you have a history of migraine headaches, which psychosomatic medicine associates with neurotic tension, it seems likely that you are a chronic worrier, morbidly inclined to make mountains out of molehills.

Thus I suggest a careful reading of Joshua Loth Liebman's book, "Peace of Mind" (Simon & Schuster, publishers), to give you a clear new outlook on life. And as for Larry's defensive claim that Joyce's report is a lie, psychologists call it a reassuring, if childish, reaction. The man who stoutly falsifies to his wife in a case of the kind is proving thereby that he loves her dearly despite his frailties, and is afraid to admit his mistake for fear of losing her. So take heart and cease repining.

Different . . . and Economical

Crusty brown meat loaf—full of savory seasonings and juicy goodness—is an economical dish that will bring the family to the dinner table on the double. Here's how to make one that's a bit different, mixed with a dash of lemon juice and served with a ring around of creamy cauliflower:

SPICED MEAT LOAF

2 pounds ground beef	2 teaspoons salt
1 pound ground pork	¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup soft bread crumbs	½ teaspoon ground cloves
1 cup milk	¼ teaspoon nutmeg
2 eggs, slightly beaten	2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion	1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Soak breadcrumbs in milk for 5 minutes. Combine meat, breadcrumbs, milk, egg, and seasonings. Mix thoroughly. Pack in greased casserole and bake in medium oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 1½ hours.

How to Care for Angora Sweater

I just got a hand-made angora sweater. What can I do to keep it from shedding and what is the proper care of it? I tried storing it in the refrigerator, but it still sheds something awful. It has a very fancy low neckline and open work puff sleeves. I suppose it should be dry cleaned but will it come out of it all right?

C. B. W.

Because angora yarn is made from short fibers spun loosely, it is inevitable that it will shed and there is very little which can be done to lesson the shedding. Brushing and shaking to remove loose hairs may help temporarily, but as soon as more fibers work loose the shedding will continue.

As for care, it could be either sent to a reliable dry cleaner or washed at home. If you wash it at home, trace the outline of the sweater on a large piece of white paper so that you can pat it into the right shape and dry the sweater flat on the paper. Use a mild soap, just warm water and whip up a good suds. Squeeze the sweater in the suds gently, trying not to agitate it unnecessarily. Do not lift the sweater out of the water as you wash it for this will stretch it. When clean, squeeze the water out and rinse in several waters until the water remains clear. Always squeeze, never wring it. When you have as much water squeezed out as is possible, lay it onto a dry bath towel and roll it into the towel to squeeze it and remove as much more moisture as possible. Remove from the towel and place on the previously made pattern, patting and easing it to the exact shape. Place it where it can be dried undisturbed. When thoroughly dry, brush lightly.

I have a new suit of dark green pinwale corduroy material (made to order) and it has an offensive order which makes me think of garlic. Can this be removed before wearing without dry cleaning or washing?

Placing the suit out-of-doors to sun and air on a breezy day might eliminate the odor. Or, try raving it steamed at a dry cleaning establishment.

Two More Join House of Mercy Hospital Staff

The House of Mercy at Klingle rd. and Rosemont ave. nw. has added two new members to its staff. Miss Mary Middleton Read has just arrived in Washington to begin her work as director of the house, and Mrs. Lois Parsons will be in charge of case work. Both workers bring invaluable training and experience to their positions.

Under the auspices of the Episcopal Church in Washington, the House of Mercy has been serving the Washington community since 1882 as a home for unmarried mothers. It is completely nonsectarian. During the past year 84 girls found shelter there, and 63 babies were delivered.

The new director of the house, Miss Read, was born in Charleston, S. C., and educated at the Bryn Mawr School and Johns Hopkins Teachers College in Baltimore. She is an experienced social worker, especially with family organizations and children's institutions. Her last post was at the Children's Home of Baltimore.

Mrs. Parsons comes from the Arlington Community Chest and council. She took her master of social sciences degree from Smith College in Northampton, and since then has had extensive work in social service problems throughout the country. From 1943 to 1947 she served as chairman of the Committee on Unmarried Parenthood at the Council of Social Agencies in Washington, and since 1945 she has been a member of the National Committee on Services to Unmarried Parents.

The House of Mercy is supported by an endowment fund, and by its two annual fund-raising drives, the food and apron sale in the fall, and the "phantom dinner" in the late winter.

Factional Strife Bars Unity In Indonesia, Speaker Says

By Nicha Soure

Although Indonesians agree that the Dutch should relinquish their control of the Asiatic country as soon as possible in order to form the United States of Indonesia, political factions disagree as to the way it should be done, Sayid Almassawa said yesterday at the Zonta Club luncheon.

The country today is trisected into the Communist-dominated Republic of Indonesia, the Federated States of Indonesia and the six autonomous territories of Borneo, he said. The Federated States of Indonesia believe they can achieve their independence through peaceful evolutionary means while the Communists are trying revolutionary methods.

Mr. Almassawa, who as a member of the permanent secretariat of the Federated States is touring America explaining his government's point of view, said, "We never make the headlines since we believe in peaceful methods rather than uprisings."

The weak point of the Republican government, Mr. Almassawa believes, is that the members of the Parliament are appointed whereas the Federated States and the autonomous territories in Borneo are elected. The Federated States comprise West Java, East Java, Madura, East Indonesia, South Sumatra and East Sumatra while the Republic consists of one third of Java and two thirds of Sumatra.

In 1947, Federalist leaders came to Lake Success to present the Indonesian question to the Security Council of the United Nations, Mr. Almassawa said, but were prevented from bringing the discussion to the floor through the veto of Mr. Gromyko.

Mr. Almassawa was introduced at the Zonta Club by the program chairman, Dr. Inez Wilbur. Mrs. Alice Colbert Sheldon, president, presided at the meeting.

99 44/100% Allure—The Floats

Hammer and Paste Pot Artists Are Creating Masterful Mummery

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

A PUSHOVER for floats, yet somehow having missed every known Mardi Gras, Mummer's procession and Elk get-together, this reporter, compass in fist, safaried cross-District, eventually penetrated the nethermost sous-sol of the National Guard Armory. Once in the Armory we trekked across acres of floor, dodging leggy high school athletes perversely pursuing bouncing basketballs, mushed along miles of peach-tiled corridors, stamped futilely up and downstairs. Only a Seeing-Eye dog or the National Guard captain we finally clamped onto could have discovered the basement garage where Mr. Earl Hargrove and his minions were painting, scraping, hammering.

MR. HARGROVE, who heads a display company, emerged from behind a curious conglomeration of props—a crated, life-size horse; a larger-than-life pink paper eagle; a longhorn steer patchworked with strips of newspaper; three cows built in the same weird way; a 10-foot silver dollar; an equally enlarged red tinsel; a 3-foot-tall replica of the White House; cardboard cut-outs of pigs, chickens, turkeys. Cheek-to-jowling were rows of exceedingly businesslike gray-green jeeps, trucks, other military vehicles.

MR. H. IS BUILDING 14 of the 40 floats approved for the Inaugural Parade. The designs are fancy as all get-out, involving papier mache models of everything from coal tipple to waterfall arched with a violent rainbow; from outsize butter carton to colonial cottage. The complicated works rest on a chassis of steel bars covered with planking and made mobile by small airplane wheels. Except for the Missouri float, which will be drawn by percherons borrowed from a distillery; each will be towed by a jeep. They're partially weather-proofed but in case of blizzard or other climatic crisis their parade will be postponed until the following day.

They're Pretty, Expensive

FLOAT CONSTRUCTION costs anywhere from $1500 to $3000. Individual organizations, clubs, business firms foot the bills. Kentucky, for example, will glorify favorite son, "Dear Alben" with no less than six floats plus the only steam calliope in existence. The calliope, rented from the Cole Circus, can't utter a peep unless an inside fire is kept stoked. Chef d'oeuvre of the Kentucky collection is the Reynolds Metal contribution. Atop a base of scalloped silverish metal (Reynolds Metal, see?) covered with blue-grass matting stands a papier mache horse, newly saddled, bridled, painted to look-like the Calumet Farms' sensational racer. In front reads a legend: "Truman and Barkley ran like Citation."

BODY-BLOW TO REALISM, however, will be a pretty girl, instead of a real jockey in the saddle. The Missouri float features important milestones in the President's political career. Sprinkled among the mementos will be models of Capital and White House (very new look with the balcony included) constructed after hours by Mailman Milton Hess. They're painstakingly made, perfectly scaled. The District's float is sure to cause a mild furor. The tow jeep's to be completely covered, converted into a huge ballot box splashed with the pertinent question "Freedom to Vote?" An antique wooden statue of Columbia's to ride the bumper.

ON THE FLOAT ITSELF a live Columbia will brave wintery blasts in traditional, flowing robes. Setup behind will be a replica of the campaign train's observation platform with photostatic "blowups" of the President and his political entourage. Nevada's building the tallest float, Hawaii's flying over thousand of flowers, Maryland's plugging a tercentenary celebration, the Communication Workers are going to town with telegraph poles and such-fiendish inventions, North Carolina's featuring her coal and California's sending across continent on a flatcar, both float and jeep. The California numero is said to be all gold and exceedingly plush. The floats are all sentimental, cock-eyed but lots of fun. Afterwards they'll be lined up on the Mall a few days for closer public inspection.

Miss Margaret Louise Wagg will be married in June to Dr. David Hargis Barker. Her engagement has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Evarts Judson Wagg of Woodside, Park, Md. Dr. Barker, son of Mrs. Howard Parson Brown of Silver Spring and the late Mr. Brown, is a resident physician at Gallinger Hospital. He was graduated from the University of Maryland School of Medicine. Miss Wagg is a graduate of Hood College

Singers Delight Guests At French Embassy Fete

By Marie McNair

LES COMPAGNONS DE LA CHANSON delighted a small group of the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet's friends at a 5 o'clock party yesterday at the embassy.

The nine young Frenchmen who have been touring this country for three months, sang about the sailor who loved only "the eyes of his mother, the eyes of his girl." They sang with gestures about two American bureaucrats, and a version of "Clair de Lune" as the Russian Cossack Chorus might do it. They ended with a "Happy Birthday, Adele," to Mrs. Robert Lovett, wife of the Undersecretary of State, who smiled prettily in return.

And then-between appearances at the Shoreham last night, they went to the 1925 F Street Club to entertain dinner guests of Attorney General and Mrs. Tom Clark.

Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the newly appointed Secretary of State, in a taupe taffeta frock a tangerine colored felt hat, brought her daughter, Mrs. Dudley Brown, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. David Acheson, with her, the one a brunette, the other blonde, young Mrs. Acheson's fair hair uncovered.

Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, was there and Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover and Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, who laughed at the songsters together.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon wore the smart black and brown combination, her black frock of swishing taffeta, topped with a tobacco brown felt hat trimmed with black taffeta ribbon. Mrs. James L. Houghteling was in two shades of gray with a tiny red pillbox on her silvery gray hair.

And I must not forget to mention the hostess in a slim black frock with peg top skirt, who's always a jump ahead of Dame Fashion herself.

Others enjoying music and champagne yesterday were the Chief of Protocol Stanley Woodward and Mrs. Woodward, who made two entrances, first without a hat, then in a black turban; Mrs. Emory Land, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mrs. Philip Graham, M. and Mme. Andre Visson, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth and Stuart, her tall and handsome son, and Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller.

Some few of us went on from there to the Chilean Embassy where . . .

Six Newsmen Decorated By Chilean Ambassador

The Chilean Ambassador, Felix Nieto del Rio, fastened the blue ribbon and antique gold medal of the Chilean order, Al Merito, about the collars of half a dozen newsmen in a ceremony yesterday followed by cocktails at the embassy.

The decoration, Al Merito, was created in June, 1817, by Bernardo O'Higgins, father of Chilean independence, "in recognition of brilliant deeds, great talents and high virtue." Recipients of the awards yesterday were Francis Brown, a senior editor of Time, and editor of the Latin-American edition Charles Merz, editor of the New York Times; John O'Rourke, editor of the Washington Daily News Drew Pearson, columnist; Joshua B. Powers, president of Editors Press, and Harold B. Rogers of the staff of the Washington Star.

Among personal friends of hosts and honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Miss Dolly Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Durrance, Miss Creel Durrance, Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Riefler.

Raw Cabbage Juice Found Quick Cure For Peptic Ulcers

San Francisco, Jan. 12 (AP).—A remarkable speedup in the healing of peptic ulcers when treated with raw cabbage juice was reported today by Dr. Garnett Cheney of the Stanford University Medical School.

Thirteen patients, some with ulcers of long standing, received the treatment. In 11 cases the ulcers disappeared in six to nine days, Dr. Cheney said.

One case required 23 days of treatment. In the thirteenth patient, the ulcer sore disappeared but a bump-like deformity remained after 8 days.

Seven had ulcers of the duodenum. The other six had ulcers in the stomach.

The rest of the diet included nearly everything except pork and friend foods. Patients were allowed to smoke but got no alcoholic drinks.

Scott Seen Safe As GOP Chairman

Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr., of Pennsylvania, will be continued as Republican national chairman when the National Committee meets in Omaha, Nebr., two weeks hence, party officials forecast yesterday.

These sources, representing several factions in the party, reported that attempts to organize opposition to Representative Scott had collapsed, and that his continuance as national chairman would apparently be accepted without a fight.

They forecast, however, that an executive committee composed of "veteran" members of the National Committee would be appointed to advise Scott on the party's organizational activities in preparation for the 1950 congressional election and the 1952 presidential race.

What's the Verdict?

WHO'S GUILTY?

Q.—Two deputy sheriffs captured a man who had gone crazy, and tied him to a post in his barn. While the officers, who had been pretty badly hurt in the fight, were treating one another's bruises, the crazy man's adult son slipped into the barn and cut his father's bonds. As a result the crazy man was able to get hold of a gun and kill one of the officers in his subsequent attempt to escape. Of what crimes are the father and son guilty?

A.—As a general rule insane persons aren't criminally responsible for their acts. Since intent is an essential element of most crimes, and since insane persons are presumed incapable of controlling their thoughts, the father would escape criminal punishment here. But the son is guilty of murder. The law charges him with having the criminal intent that his father lacks. He has deliberately loosed a homicidal maniac and is guilty of the acts of the irresponsible agency he has loosed.—F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

The only dreams that comfort me . . . Are those I dream of you . . . And always in my heart I hope . . . They will be coming true . . . The dream that we shall meet again . . . When spring is in ne air . . . And all the happiness f life . . . Is ours to hold and hare . . . The vision of a winter ight . . . When you belonged to ie . . . And every word you whispered, dear . . . Became a memory . . . I do not look for miracles . . . And yet I hope and pray . . . That some day it will seem as though . . . You never went away . . . At Least My Dreams

The only dreams that comfort me . . . Are those I dream of you . . . And always in my heart I hope . . . They will be coming true . . . The dream that we shall meet again . . . When spring is in ne air . . . And all the happiness f life . . . Is ours to hold and hare . . . The vision of a winter ight . . . When you belonged to ie . . . And every word you whispered, dear . . . Became a memory . . . I do not look for miracles . . . And yet I hope and pray . . . That some day it will seem as though . . . You never went away . . . And while we may not kiss again . . . And we may never wed . . . At least I have my dreams of you . . . To keep me comforted.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

'Will You Be Careful?' Is Jackpot Question

Here's a bad weather driving hint:

The Red Cross blood bank helps save the lives of those who are injured in accidents.

But there's no sense in driving as if you're trying to break the bank.

WORTH WAITING FOR?

Circulation Director John Corson has owed us a "funny" story ever since we got some new subscriptions for him. He submits the following with the explanation that although it isn't brand new, it's still funny:

A fellow walks into a grocery store and notices that the shelves are filled with sacks of salt. More salt is heaped high on the counters, on the floor, and in every available storage space.

The clerk says, "Something for you?" and the fellow replies yes, he'd like a loaf of bread. The clerk says okay, and trudges off toward the back of the store, then down a flight of steps to the basement. Eventually, he returns with the loaf of bread.

"How come you keep it down in the basement?" asks the customer.

"Have to," answers the grocer. "No room for it up here."

"Yeah," says the customer, "I notice that you've got a terrific stock of salt up here. This store must sell a tremendous amount of salt."

"No," replies the grocer, "as a matter of fact, I sell very little salt. But the fellow who sells it to me—boy, can THAT guy sell salt!"

WILL SWISS RETRIEVE THEIR GOLDEN RETRIEVER?

Like Ferdinand the Bull, Tawny loves to sniff the flowers. And when our unseasonably mild weather brought out the dandelions and such recently, Tawny was in seventh heaven.

He sniffed all through the Swiss Legation garden, and then sniffed his way out through the gate, and into the wonderful world outside.

And for all the folks at the Legation know, he's still on his tour of exploration — because they haven't seen him since.

For that statement, I have the word of Mrs. Charles Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister. Mrs. Bruggmann hopes that when Tawny gets finished with his sniffing he'll come right straight home.

There are some new flowers in the garden that haven't been investigated yet.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three 7-week-old kittens; neat, bright, pretty and very cute." (Emerson 9028.)

"Four-year-old male Doberman pinscher; since we sold our country place, we've had to keep him in a kennel, which is unkind." (Dupont 4745.)

MIKE ALMOST "CAUGHT IT" WHEN GRANDPA GOT A BITE

G. R. Cooley of 4317 15th st. nw. regales friends with stories about his grandson, Mike.

One of the best dates back to the days when Mike was teething. Grandpa and Mike were romping on the floor, with Mike periodically biting a chunk out of his long-suffering grandfather.

In an attempt to break Mike of the habit, District Liner Cooley tried a little child psychology. The next time Mike bit him, he pretended to cry.

That, he felt, would appeal to the child's better nature. And he was pleased to observe that Mike watched the flow of crocodile tears with great interest.

Thereupon Grandpa felt that the lesson had been learned, and resumed his romping. And at the first opportunity, Mike sank all nine of his teeth into the tenderest available portion of the Cooley anatomy — and Grandpa let out a yell that could be heard for blocks.

Forgetting all about child psychology, he turned to administer some old-fashioned punishment. But Mike stopped him cold with an angelic smile and the simple query:

"More cry, Grandpa?"

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

I'm not surprised by Secretary Forrestal's decision to stay in the Cabinet. After all, no man likes to give up his Washington Post.

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Moss Hart was at a dinner party with W. Somerset Maugham this week and discussed Maugham's trip to San Francisco, where he will spend his seventy-fifth birthday with his friend, Bertram Alanson. On his fiftieth birthday Maugham had dined with Alanson, who said: "How about celebrating your seventy-fifth birthday at my home?" and Maugham agreed . . . "But what made you cross the Atlantic, and now go 3000 miles across America, just to keep a promise made 25 years ago?" Hart asked Maugham . . . "It was the fact that, although no mention had been made of it all these years," Maugham explained, "I received a simple little note from Alanson last month. It read: 'Dear Willie, we expect you on the 25th.'"

Dorothy Heyward, coauthor of "Porgy 'n' Bess," told the Woman Pays Club one day about her first play, 25 years ago, and of her telling the producer that she had seen an ingenue who could play the role well . . . "No," the producer wrote her, "I'm going to get you a $1000-a-week actress, and not this $300-a-week actress, Helen . . . uh . . . Hayes."

Louis Calhern, who closed in "The Play's the Thing" last week in Philadelphia, lunched at the Algonquin the other day. Calhern was wearing a bright-checked suit. "An unemployed actor," he explained, "should dress, in wintertime, as if he's just on his way to Palm Beach."

Errol Flynn tells of an aviator in India, who is a friend of his, and who bought a precious star sapphire. As a preliminary to smuggling it through customs, he put the gem in his middle, and placed a wide bandage over it—secure in his belief that customs men wouldn't make him disrobe, and if they did they wouldn't remove the bandage from an open wound . . . In a Bombay bar that night he saw another flier enter, wearing a rare star sapphire ring, and boasting how pure and unmatchable it was. The first flier shrugged: "Aw, g'wan, I wear better stones than that in my navel."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Rift Is Hazard in Webb Choice

By Drew Pearson

At a White House press conference in 1946, newsmen, knowing a new Director of the Budget had just been selected, asked President Truman for his name. The President hesitated, fumbled on his desk for a piece of paper, picked it up and read the name:

Webb

"James E. Webb," he said.

It was obvious from Truman's hesitation that he had not known Webb before.

In the two years that have passed, however, Budget Director Webb has so won the confidence of Harry Truman that last week he was appointed to the No. 2 spot in American foreign affairs—Undersecretary of State.

As such, his job will be to oil the creaking State Department machinery and fire some of the diplomatic doodlers who have been piddling away the peace. He was picked personally by Truman for this job, and will run the State Department, leaving Acheson free to run foreign affairs.

Webb will be Truman's man. As such, there is, of course, the risk of setting up more Sumner Welles-Cordell Hull-type friction. Webb, however, is easy to get along with, knows almost nothing about foreign affairs, but has had about as good an efficiency training in and out of Government as any young man in Washington.

It began when a truck ran into a car near Raleigh, N. C., 26 years ago, killing the secretary of North Carolina's Congressman Edward Pou, then chairman of the Rules Committee. Pou, looking for a new secretary, turned to young Jim Webb, then a flier in the Marine Corps, got him discharged and brought him to Washington.

Max Gardner Finds Webb

One year later, another North Carolinian, the late former Gov. Max Gardner, came to Washington to set up a law firm. Max was looking for a man with Washington know-how to join his firm, and at 6 o'clock one morning sat up in bed to tell his law partner, Fred Morrison, that Jim Webb was the man.

"Dont 'you think you'd better talk to Congressman Pou before you take away his secretary?" suggested Morrison.

"No," replied Max, who came from western North Carolina. "I understand these eastern North Carolinians. They pay a man $2500 a year and want to keep him for life. I'm going to talk to Jimmy first."

He did—with the result that young Webb joined the Gardner law firm.

A year or so later, after Jim Farley had canceled the air mail contracts, the Gardner law firm represented the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, including Sperry Gyroscope, which brought Webb in contact with another North Carolinian, Tom Morgan, head of Sperry.

Morgan, an eastern North Carolinian, decided to do what Max Gardner had done to Congressman Pou. He grabbed Jimmy Webb as his assistant. For the next seven years, therefore, Webb worked as an executive of Sperry Gyroscope, until in 1943 he rejoined the Marines.

Webb got out of the Marine Corps in 1945, by which time his old friend Max Gardner had been appointed Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Max persuaded Webb to return to Government as his assistant. Later Max sold Webb to Truman as the best man to handle the intricate job of Director of the Budget.

Note—As Undersecretary of State, Webb's policies will be on the conservative side. As Director of the Budget, he put universal military training ahead of aid to education—though perhaps on White House orders. And, despite President Truman's vigorous election campaign for health and social welfare, Webb recently chopped every cent for health out of the Alaskan budget.

Labor-Farm-Business

Albert Goss, master of the National Grange, had some interesting advice for President Truman when he called at the White House.

"The time has come, Mr. President," said Goss, "for business, labor and agriculture to quit thumbing their noses at each other if we are to survive these trying times of mounting debt and threats of war. The leaders of all three groups must sit down around the table and start pulling together as a team to keep our democratic system functioning."

Truman said he thought the idea of a conference among business, labor and farm leaders was a good one, and promised to think it over.

'More Democrats'

Inaugural Committee Chairman Melvin Hildreth was telling the President about the huge demand for tickets for the Inaugural.

"Never in history has an inaugural stimulated such tremendous popular support and enthusiasm," said Hildreth. "The people are as enthusiastic now as they were the day after your election."

"The answer may be, Mel," grinned Truman, "that there are a lot more Democrats than there used to be."

Merry-Go-Round

At 7 a. m. on Inaugural Day, President Truman will breakfast with the little group of men he commanded in World War I—Battery D, 129th Field Artillery. They will breakfast at the Mayflower Hotel on Missouri ham, and the high point of the occasion will be when Captain Truman calls the roll of his wartime comrades. . . . Madame Chiang Kai-shek has about completed a deal to purchase a huge, 30-room mansion and estate near General Marshall's home in Virginia. It will cost $175,000—enough to feed a lot of Chinese coolies . . . Young Congressman Bennett of Florida is introducing a bill whereby the Federal Government would reimburse the States for all schools erected for Negroes and Indians . . . All three services will get equal billing in the President's Inaugural parade—thanks to Army Chief of Staff Omar Bradley. Invited to ride at the head of the parade as marshal, Bradley accepted the honor. But he privately got on the phone and asked Chief of Naval Operations Louis Denfeld and Air Force Chief of Staff Hoyt Vandenberg to ride with him . . . Both the CIO and AFL have teamed up in a petition asking the Justice Department, Treasury Department and the Senate to investigate Senator Homer Ferguson in his home State. The charges are based upon facts first published in the Washington Merry-Go-Round . . .

President Truman wants his White House Chief of Staff, Admiral William Leahy, to write a book telling the inside story behind the wartime Big Three conferences . . . Maine's GOP Senator Owen Brewster, who frequently takes to the air himself, is now championing the Navy cause in a magazine article called "The Navy Takes To The Air." Writing for the Aero Digest, Brewster chooses sides in the Navy-Air Force controversy, refers to their bitter squabble over appropriations as a "healthy struggle for funds."

No man can afford to neglect his hair—

SAYS HARRY JAMES

Popular Orchestra Leader

"REGARDLESS as to what his profession or trade might be—a good head of hair is every man's most valuable personal appearance asset. No man can afford to let his hair become dull and scraggly looking. When he does, he handicaps himself by adding false years to his age. Since I turned my problems of hair care over to Thomas, I have had no hair worries at all. My scalp feels fine and my hair seems to be full of life," says Harry James.

Perhaps your hair, too, needs the skilled attention of a Thomas expert. Perhaps you are worried about dandruff scales, or the itch which dandruff causes? Why not do as a quarter-million other persons have done—consult a Thomas expert? Come in today! He'll show you how Thomas removes loose dandruff and relieves the scalp itch which dandruff causes.
